HENRY PETERSON & CO., Publishers, PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1867. Price 80.50 A Year, in Advance. Whele Number Issued, 8468.8

THREE LITTLE GIRLS.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. BY MAGGIE C. PYBURN.

Three little girls, rosy, bright little girls, Out in the garden beneath the warm light That a red summer sunset has thrown on the sky, To check for a moment the coming of night. Bright Theo, whose laugh ripples out on the May, with her head running over with curls,— And Dora, a baby-pet, violet-syed; My three little girls, little motherless girls!

While I lie in the gloom of my still, darkened

And feel every day I am passing away:
No music's so sweet as the sound of their feet,
And their noise and their glee as I hear them

But a thought of unrest stirs at times in my breast; a care round my heart like a shadow is thrown : I have nought but my blessing to give to my And I fear for their sakes when I leave them

They are girls, they are clinging and sensitive things;

And the world it is hard, and the world it is Their shoulders are slight to bear burdens of

Their fingers are elim to win honors or gold:

I fear me the way will be rough for their feet;

With no father to shield them, no mother to

No love that would light up their lives with a glow Of warmth and of joy had they nothing

Their home has been soft as the nest which a

Might weave for her little ones safe from the

No roses but thornless ones clustered within, No ray but was sunny an entrance could find:

re they have opened like beautiful flowers, That in soft summer weather, in supehine

Oh! grant that the storm may be turned from their path, That the wind may be kept from the lambs that are shorn !

Bring them in! Let me take them once more

Ah! the dainty white bonnets, the dresses of Mue, wee rosy mouths running over with smiles

They are just like three lilles made fresh by

Our Heavenly Father, I bow to Thy will, I will leave in Thy keeping my treasures, my pearls; Thou who knowest the love of a father's fond heart.

Oh! shield and protect them, my three little girls!

"And is it not the truth, Miss Crawford? Can girle!

CARLYON'S YEAR.

By the author of " Lost Sir Massingberd." &c.

CHAPTER XV.

AGNES AND SISTER MEG.

Doubtless it was with the elastic vigor that characterises the acts of most of us when we have done a good stroke of business in what-ever walk of life, that Mrs. Newman reverted to herself a gratuitous luncheon. Yet none of her compositions seemed to give her satisfaction.
But for her forethought in using scraps of paper for her rough draughts, she might have wasted two-penny worth of Bath note.

"I will go and see the girl myself," murmured she, impatiently; "that will be better than writing."

She would have started on the instant, for Mrs. Newman was not a person to let the grass grow under her feet when once a resolution was formed; but she could not bring herself to sacrifice, or, at all events, expose to possible miscarriage and loss, that excelient slice of mut-ton. And here she made a mistake. It is providentially arranged that very prudent and saving persons shall invariably, at one time or another, miss their mackerel, through an unwillinguess to expose their sprat to possible loss; in their exclusive care of the pence the pound ocasionally take to themselves wirge; their pin a day secures to them their groat a year, but in picking it up they sometimes neglect more important sources of income. Thus, in waiting for her gratuitous lunch, Mrs. Newman missed opportunity of putting a stop to that con-lation between her brother and Agnes Crawversation between her brother and Agnes Crawford, which we have had the privilege of overhearing. If she had started on her mission without walting for that slice of mutton, she than to least me thus, Mrs. Newman," returned the wanting. If he had not piety and propriety, as our gardener says, (and a remarkable long head has gardener) he would be perfect; and though I think it my duty not to let him know it, this I will say—never had servants a better the man, that (would have liked to have) kissed the maiden all forlorn, that lived in the house called Greycrege! As it was, Mrs. Newman did not start for that

As it was, Mrs. Newman did not start for that retired mension until 2.80 P. M. She errived in her basket pony-carriage, driven by the small foot-page: like a baleful fairy, who, though drawn by fiery dragons, guided by a duodecimo fiend, reaches the house of the young princess the day after her coming-of-age, when it is vain to wish her wall-eyed or web-footed. But, out of sidand it is never too late to do mischleft.

of elfland, it is never too late to do mischief.

Agnes had a foreboding that evil was impending when Cubra hissed through the keyhole, "Miss Newman come, and wish to see you very partickler;" nor did her instinct de-

Nothing could be sweeter than the smile with Nothing could be sweeter than the smile win which her guest arose as she entered the drawing-room, and greeted her as a mother might greet a daughter. It was the first time that Mrs. Newman had visited Greycrage since the Crawfords had resided there, and she had a great deal to say about the improvements that had been effected in the meantime. At last she

"What a charming lawn you have, my dear Miss Crawford; but what a pity it is that you allow horses upon it, for surely I see hoof-

["Ab," thought the speaker, "it's all true The hussy blushes. It's quite as well I acted upon dear Jed's suggestions."]
"Yes, those are Red Berild's host marks; the horse your brother rode when he saved my cousin and me upon the sands. I wished to take his portrait."

"My brother's portrait?"
"No, madam; Red Berild'a." They were ooking steadily in one another's faces. Agnee had quite recovered herself. Mrs. Newman felt that no easy task was awaiting her.

"It is all the same," said she, "whether it was the horse or the rider. I am an old woman that is, comparatively speaking—and you, Miss Statis, comparatively speaking—and you, miss Crawford, are a very young one. I am quite sure that you are unaware of the consequences—I mean of the construction which must needs be put, nay, which of late has been put upon my brother's visits to this house. In your exceeding innecence—"here Mrs. Newman placed a hand with a degree eleven on it upon her esoding innecesses—"here Mrs. Newman public a hand with a darned glove on it upon her a hand with a darned glove on it upon her the shoulder, and her voice became young friend's shoulder, and her voice became even tenderer and more winning—" and in your happy ignorance of the ways of the world, you nwittingly given this wicked creature-"The horse, madam?"

"Miss Crawford, I am astonished at you. This levity is most unlooked for, most unbe-coming. I say that you have unwittingly—as I hope, unwillingly—given this wicked and aban-doned man encouragement. I am obliged to

"So it seems, Mrs. Newman, since you call your own brother by such names" She drew herself slowly away, so that her guest's hand, you pretend to be ignorant that John Carlyen is an infidel? And is not that to be wicked and

We are all wicked, madam; but we cannot tell whom God has abandoned.

"And I thought this was a Caristian woman!" exclaimed Mrs. Newman, holding up her hands. "How we are deceived in this world."

"Yes, madam," returned Agnes, coldly, "it is only in the next world that a true judgment will be arrived at, and even then we shall not e the judges."

If Mr. Richard Crawford had been occupying his usual post (which be was not) half way up the hill, or even higher, he could not have failed to hear Mrs. Newman sniff; it was like a hippopotamus who has just emerged from under

"Perhaps you think the infidel is only to be pitied, young lady," observed she, with what, had she been an irreligious person, would certainly have been termed a sneer. "New pity, we all know, is akin to love."
"Mrs. Newman!"

"Yes; I can read it in your face. You love is man. You would marry him if he saked you to do so.

"That is false, madam, and I think you know

Notwithstanding this unpleasant imputation, Mrs. Newman was pleased. The girl was on her part evidently speaking truth. No irretrievable mischief had as yet been done. If he had pro-posed, she had not accepted him, although perhape she might not have rejected him.

"I would never marry any man," she went on, "with the opinions you have, however uncn.

charitably, described." "But you are not without hope that his opinions may change," observed Mrs. Newman, quickly. "You believe in this man's possible conversion. Perhaps you believe that you your-self may be the happy instrument. You do; I

"Not before I have told you the whole truin," exclaimed the other, stepping swiftly towards her, and grasping her by the wrist. "Your conscience whispers that you are looking beyond the convert for the lover. If you have hitherto deceived yourself, you can do so no longer now, for I have undeceived you."

"And you do not wish your brother to be con-

"By you, no," answered Mrs. Newman, fiercely; "that is," added ehe, recollecting herself, "because such a thing is out of your power; you do not know how strong he is this man. It is you who would be perverted by him. Two precious souls lost in the endeavor to save one."

"He did not think of his own life when he spurred across the whirling river to rescue mine," murmured Agnes, as though to herself. "A reckless man will do anything for a pretty face, girl."

"You hurt my wrist, madam; please to let me go. A reckless man! A brave and noble man, I say, and one to be rf the same blood with whom should make you proud."

"Those are strong words, young lady, and sourcely modest ones. If I must needs be proud of being this man's sister, how fine a thing it would be to be his wife. And it would be a fine thing to some people."

would be to be his wife. And it would be a fine thing to some people."

Up till now, Mrs. Newman had preserved the habitual smile and gentle tones that had stood her in such good stead through years of vulgar and penurious greed, but at these words her look and manner became those of a shrew.

"For a girl, for instance," she went on, "without money, without family—springing, in fact, from no one knows whom or whence, it deabtless would be a great matter to secure John Carlyon for a husband; that is to say, if she had no religious principles whatever, and was only bent upon attaining a position for herself in this world. But for you, Miss Crawford, no matter what the advantage you might gain by such a marriage, I will take leave to gain by such a marriage, I will take leave to tell you..."

"Nothing more, madam," interposed Agnes,
"Nothing more, madam," interposed Agnes, with dignity, at the same time ringing the bell sharply for her visitor's carriage. "I will not listen to another word. You have said enough already, far more than any gentlewoman ought to say. Any honor to be gained by alliance with one of your family would indeed be dearly purchased if it entailed intimacy with such as

Mrs. Newman curtaied deeply with her custo

"Thank you, Miss Crawford," said she. have also to be grateful to you—" here the ser-vant entered and received his orders, retiring, doubtless, with the impression that the tw ladies were most uncommonly polite to one another-" for having exhibited to me under the disguise of a Caristian young person, an unprincipled girl, and a designing fortune hunter."

"She can never see him again after that,"
"She can never see him again after that," murmured Mrs. Newman, as, leaning back in her pony carriage, she thought over that heavy chainshot delivered at parting. lutely necessary that I should not minos mat-ters; and what a comfort it is to think that I have acted for the girl's own good !

CHAPTER XVI. SENTENCE OF DEATH

It was on the morning after the interview between Mrs Newman and Agnes that Mr. Caretairs, calling, as he often did, at Woodlees, was for the first time, so fortunate as to find its proprietor at home.

"Mr. John is in to-day, ele," said old Robin whose eye twinkling upon this subject had be come chronic; "he really is, for once"

"Oh," ejaculated the costor, by no means with satisfaction, but rather like one who, having received certain information that his den-tiet is out of town, has gone to consult him re-specting a troublesome tooth, and finds him in. Not gone to Greycrege this morning, then, eh,

" No, sir; but he's got a letter from the young lady. Leastways, one was brought to him five minutes ago; and if you had seen his face when he took it into his hand—ob, yes, we was right about that, bless you. 'There was no answer,' said the man as brought it over. Why, of course not; what's the need of answering by letter when my gentleman rides over every mertal day? Perhaps he's put off a bit, that's

Perhaps," said Mr. Caretairs, musing. "I tell you what, sir," went on the garrulous old man, "it will be a sore day for Miss Meg as was when the young quire marrier. She counted upon Woodless for Master Jedediah, bless you. But it's better as it is, to my thipking; for Miss Aguss, she'll win Mr. John to what's right, to the path as my old master walked in all the days of his life-a good man, Mr. Caretairs, if ever there was one-and that is all as is really If he had but piety and propriety, as wanting.

might (to use a culinary metaphor while speaking of a kindred subject) have cooked someing of a kindred subject) have cooked somebody's goose pretty completely. Imagine the effect of her appearance upon that sunny lawn;
she would have frightened the horse, and worried
she would have frightened the horse, and worried
the man, that (would have liked to have) kissed
the man, that (would have liked to have) kissed the maiden all forlorn, that lived in the house called Greycrage!

Agnes, trembling, "I will retire." Her courage, so high when it was he who was attacked, sank you know, Miss Meg as was, she was always alone.

"Not before I have told you the whole truth," set sclaimed the other, stepping swiftly towards the man, that (would have liked to have) kissed ther, and grasping her by the wrist. "Your conscience whispers that you are looking beyond the convert for the lover. If you have hitherto master, or a kinder, than Mr. John. Whereas, near—very pions and very proper, but most audacious near. Why, I remember, as if it was "Not before I have told you the whole truth," set reday, when our Susan (she as was married to him as kept the Disney Arms, and a sad
her, and grasping her by the wrist. "Your conscience whispers that you are looking beyond the convert for the lover. If you have hitherto master, or a kinder, than Mr. John. Whereas, not set of the gave my life. What years of wreschednear—very pions and very proper, but most audacious near. Why, I remember, as if it was yesterday, when our Susan (she as was married to him as kept the Disney Arms, and a sad her, and grasping her by the wrist. "Your condrunkard he was, but they're both gone now.)
"You have a least
"You have a lways
of the grave!"
"You have the before me ere I gain the shelter of the grave!"
"You have a lways
of the grave!"
"You have the before me ar way be force mear—very pions and very proper, but most audacious near. Why, I remember, as if it was the grave!"
"You have a lways
of the grave!"
"You have a lways
of the grave!"
"Y master, or a kinder, than Mr. John. Whereas, you know, Miss Meg as was, she was always near—very pions and very proper, but most audacious near. Why, I remember, as if it was yesterday, when our Susan (she as was married to him as kept the Disney Arms, and a aad drunkard he was, but they're both gone now.) went out to wash some oblitterlings in the militrace yonder and fell in. That was just after missis died, and Miss Meg she managed the house, and pretty nigh starved us for a matter of six months; we had to eat the innerds of everything, such as we had been used to throw away before her time, and she set us an example by having chitigs as ever you smelt. Well, Susan fell in, and the news came to the kitchen just as I was bringing in the urn, and I told Miss Meg at the breakfast table. 'Ma'am,' says I, 'while cleaning them innerds Susan Grives have tumbled into the mili-race.' 'Where are the innerds!' orted Miss Meg. I never shall forget it, bled into the mill-race.' 'Where are the innerds?' oried Miss Mag. I never shall forget it, never. Without even seking whether the girl were drowned or not, 'Where are the innerds?' Oh, yes, I do hope that Miss Mag as was, will not be mistress here in my time."
"Well, that's not very likely, Robin, is it?"
inquired the doctor, looking earnestly in the old man's face. "You surely do not expect at your age to outlive your master."
"At my age," grumbled Robin; "well, I'm sure, one would think I was Methuselah. And as to that, the young are taken, and the old as to that, the young are taken, and the old ones left, oftentimes."

"Very true, Robin," answered Mr. Garstairs aodding. "And now let me see Mr. John. know my way, and needn't trouble you to come Ah, but he sin't in the turret room lated the other, still in rather a dissatisfied to for Robin was tender as a belie of eight-and-twenty upon the point of age, "he's in the master's room. He happened to be in the hall when the letter came, and just as though he couldn't wait for a minute, he shut hisself in there to read it, and ain't been out since; I dara-as he's a getting it by heat?" chuckled the say he's a getting it by heart," chuckled the old man. "You must knock louder than that, bless ve..."

But Mr. Carstairs, getting no reply to his sum mons, and finding the door made fast, stooped down and looked through the keyhole.

down and looked through the keyhole.

"Fetch some cold water," oried he; "quick, quick!" and while uttering the words, the agile little man flew out at the garden door, and in at the window of the cedar chamber (standing open as usual to get what sunshine it could,) like a bird. There was indeed, not a moment to been caught by the sofa cushion, and remained higher than the rest of his body. His hand still clutched an open letter, the receipt of which had doubtless caused the calamity by some emo-tional shock, and a small book—it looked like a Testament-lay on the floor by his side. The doctor's quick eye took in all these things at a single glance, and sooner than the action could be described in words, he had freed Carlyon's the park.
throat from neckeloth and collar, and bared bie "You remember, upon the day I mention, throat from neckeloth and collar, and bared ble arm. Then, throwing open the door to get a he began to use the lancet. Would the blood never flow? Was he dead—this strong man, in Would the blood the full vigor of his prime? No; very slowly, drop by drop, but presently in a crimson tide, came the life stream; while old Robin stood by, dazed with terror, and sprinkling the cold water as often on the floor as upon his young master'

"Is it a fit, doctor ?" inquired he, in a hourse

"No, the heat of the weather, that's all," re sponded Mr. Carstairs, hastily.

ing better now. There was a deep drawn respiration, and the arge eyes drowelly opened and closed.

"You had better go away, Robin; he is com-ing to himself, and perhaps would not like to know that you had seen him in this state. Say nothing to anyone of what has happened. Hush go, go."
"Ay, ay, sir, I understand," answered the old man, moving reluctantly away. "It is me to tittle-tattle about my master's Then, as the door was pushed hastily behind him, he added, "But I knows a fit from a faint, I reakon. God forbid that Miss Meg as was should be mistress here in my time, as I was just saying; yet many's the true word spoken in jest. And he did look mortal had, eurely "

"What is the matter?" asked Carlyon, sitthing up, and passing his hand westify across his forehead. "Have I been ill, dector?"

"Yes, my friend, very ill; but you are getting over it now. Let me help you en to the so's; there "The letter! Where is it?" inquired Carlyon, feebly. "It is here," said the other, returning it to him, folded up.

"You have read it, doctor?"

"Yes; I could not help reading it-that is, The voice that was wont to be so strong and cheery sounded faint and hollow like the last boom of a funeral bell.

somehow," glancing up at the strange wes upon the wall, "I could never bring myse upon the wall, "I could never bring myself to hasten matters—to desert my post here, albeit I have nothing to guard, nothing to protect—"

Carlyon did not finish the sentence, but turned round with his face to the wall.

"That letter was from Miss Crawford, was it not?" said the doctor, very tenderly; "and its meaning is that she has refused you. I am deeply sorry, old friend, that you have been caused this pain, and I reproach myself because it was in my power to avert it."

t was in my power to avert it."
"In yours?"
"Yes." If I had done my duty, I should have told you something weeks ago which would have spared you much of this. Can you bear to hear it now?"

"I can bear anything," murmured Carlyon, wearily, "the worst that can befall has hap-pened to me already. She is not like other girls;

when she says No, she means it."

The despairing words had no such hopeless ring but that the other knew an answer was expected with some comfort in it. Yet none was

Carlyon," said be, after a long silence, " if "Carlyon," said be, after a long silence, " if Agnes Crawford had written 'Yee,' instead of 'No,' still, knowing what I know, learning what I would have been my duty to tell her, she would not have married you. And you, if you had known, you would not have saked her to become your wife."
"Your secret must indeed then be a terrible one. Perhaps I have madness in my blood. I sometimes thick I have."

"No. It is not terrible—at least, it need not be so—but only ead. Had it been what you hint at, I should have known it years ago, but this I only learnt a few weeks back—on the day when you saved Miss Crawford's life upon the

"I wish I had been drowned in saving it." "You were very nearly drowned, Carlyon. It was only your fainting under water that -aved you. Your case, I saw at once, was different from the other two; and when you lay insensible at my house, I found out this you have heart disease, John Carlyon. You nearly died spare. John Carlyon lay upon the floor, still to-day; you may die to morrow if anything breathing stertoriously, but with a face like that of a strangled man. His head had fortunately life is not worth six months' purchase. I do been caught by the sofa cushion, and remained not think it possible that you will live beyond a year." There was a solemn pause, during which the lightest sound was heard; a butterfly brushed against the open window; a bee buried in some fragrant flower beneath its eill, emitted a muffled hum; far off, on the other side of the high garden wall, the mill-race roared; the rooks cawed sleepily from the elm tops in > continued the doctor, "that I began to speak ns matters D impertinent to you that I did so; but you know the reason now. I thought—do not let us argue any more, my friend—I thought it my duty to do so, and I think so now. Science had passed your sentence of death, and it was surely meet that Religion should comfort you. I saw that I was unfit for such a task, and yet I wished to he of some service to the son of your father. be of some service to the son of your father. There, I will not speak of him again, since it pains you. But I have known you from a child, my friend, and I knew your dear mother, who gazes upon you from yender picture, with the same love and with the same fear, (I did not understand it then, but I do now,) with which I have seen her gaze upon her darling boy a hundred times."

"You understand it now?" said Carlyon, bitterly; "oh, no."

"I think I do," returned Mr. Caretairs, quietly. Said keeping his face averted, Carlyon held out his hand, which the other took tenderly within his own.

"And why did you not tell me this-I mean about my heart-before, doctor?"

" Partly, lest the shock might hurt you at that time, which, from something that you yourself let fall, I thought it would; partly because I was a coward, and loth to be the bearer of such news; but principally, because I thought I saw in Miss Agues one who would show you the road to heaven far better than I. I knew, of course, after what had happened, that you two must needs become intimate, but I did not look forward to your-to this ead end of it all. Even that, however, lies in some measure at my door. I did all for the best, and nothing has turned out as I would have had it."

"Don't fret, my friend; don't reprosch yourself, you good soul," and Carlyon, turning round and smiling upon the doctor, who stood dejected by his side. "It was not certainly your fault that I shut my eyes to the gulf that lay between me and Agnes. I am punished for my folly, that is all. "It was I, however," pursued the doctor. boom of a funeral bell.

"Oaly one word, doctor, yet with a world of meaning in it. That 'No,' means for me No to this sad end. I know that that hare-brained cousin of hers would be jealous of you. He suspecia everybody. I believe he is jealous of the the celf-willed idiot!—and so, when we were a the cell-willed idiot!—and so, when we were at Greycrage that night, I kept him to myself, solely that Miss Agnes might have some serious talk with you. I was an ass not to foresee what sort of talk it would be. I would have tald her the whole truth, but that that would have been the betrayal of a professional secret. Now, if I had here a parson I should have done as for the had been a parson I should have done so for the good of your soul,"

"Lost! lost! for ever lost!" murmured Car-

"No, no, my friend, not lost," returned the doctor, kindly. "It is never too iste to extertain more correct views upon religious matters."
"What are you talking about, man?" exclaimed Carlyon, fercely. "I was not thinking of my 'miserable soul, as you call it."
"I am son't to hear it," returned the doctor,

*And I am not going to join your fire in-surance society," added the other, econnfully. "The premium would, under the circumstances,

I have said what I thought it was my duty as a Christian man to say," said Mr. Caretairs, reddening, "and now I am here in my profes-sional capacity only. Can I do anything more for you, Mr. Carlyon?"

Yes. That instrument which I see peeping out of your pocket is the stethescope, is it not Please to use it once more."

"I have told you what its enswer will be," eaid the doctor, hesitating.
"Nevertheless," replied the other, emiling,
"I wish to make 'sicker,' as Kirkpatrick said when he drove his dirk into the Red Comyn opened his waistoost himself, and watched Mr. Carstairs steadily as he applied the instru

"When I was on the grand jury at Lancaster last year, doctor, I saw a sad scene. A mother waiting for the verdict upon her son, who was being tried for murder, and had been caught red handed in the very act. I am glad to think that when you prenounce my doom there will be none to lament for me, not one. Come, doctor, what is it? I know you are a wise man, who looks upon the bright side of things, and yet has the knack of telling the truth. You are tting your black cap on, I see. The seatence

The kind hearted doctor nodded. Perhaps he did not like to trust himself to speak.
"Good. And the stethercope never de

CE Tes ?" Never," returned Mr. Carstairs, firmly, and with some approach to indignation. "I will stake my professional reputation upon what I have stated with respect to your case."

Carl on smiled in his old, pleasant fashion.

"I would not damage your credit, doctor, by overliving my year, for all the world. And I may die in the meantime, of course?"

At any moment. To day-to-morrow. s certainly your duty to lose no time in setting your affairs in order. I think you should see your slieter, Mr. Carlyon. I met her only yester-day afternoon, and she spoke most kindly of

"Most kindly of me Then she must certainly have been speaking very ill of me to somehody else. I have always observed that in

Meg. After administering a great deal of scourge she conclines applies a little balsam."

"You are uncharitable, Carlyon. She not only spoke quite enthusiastically of your heroism upon the sands the other day, but also very patrenisingly (you know her way) about es Agnes, whom she had just been to see at escrage. Why, what's the matter? Excite Greverage.

ment of this sort is the very worst thing -"
"Did my slater go to Greycraga?" exclaimed Did that lying Carlyon, starting to his feet. woman speak to Agnes? It is she then whom I have to thank for this—this letter. I see it all now. She did not wish me to marry, lest Woodlees should not revert to her Jededia' and to stop is, she maligns me to Agnes. The hypocrite, the backbiter !"

"You are killing yourself, Mr. Carlyon."
"You are right; I will be very careful," re turned the other, bitterly, and pacing the room with hasty strides. "I should be sorry to dis within the next few days. Perhaps you will call to-morrow, and see how I am."

Carlyon took the little man by the arm and gently, but firmly, urged him towards the doer. "It is no use my coming to see you, sir," ex-postulated the doctor; "I can do nothing for

Very well, then, don't come," returned the same, as if you did!

"Sir!" ejaculated Mr. Carstairs.
"Forgive me, old friend; I am not myself. I do not know what I am saying. I thank you for all your kindness, and especially for your Doctor and patient shook hands warmly enough. Although widely different, each respected the other after his fashion.

For God's sake keep yourself quiet," was the kindly and characteristic remark of the former, as he rude away. Cariyon modded, then turned to Robin.

Tell James to saddle Red Berild directly and then come to me."
"Red Berild, Mr. John?" returned the old rarely that any one ever crossed that horse ex-Did not I say so ! ' observed Carlyon, coolly and, returning to the parlor, sat himself down to write. The note was finished before the You have been a long time coming, sir, said he, with unwonted etermese; "and Red Beilld must make up for your delay. Do no space the spur. I want this letter taken to mbrop, to Mr. Sorivena." he lawyer, sir?" Yes, the lawser: who else? There is no answer; but he or his partner is to wanted, once. If the means of conveyance are wanted,

"It is twenty miles," murmured the groom, the distance to be traversed by Shanks, his (unaccustomed) mare.

"I shall expect him here in four hours," observed Carlyon, referring to his watch instead of to this remonstrance

When sentence of death is pronounced by one's doctor, we think—that is, just at first—that it is going to be executed forthwith; and make our willis. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Parallel A New Haven c'ergyman has given up preaching and learned the carpenter's trade; at the latter he can make a living, at the former he could not. Some others might profitably follow

SATURDAY BYBNING POST.

PHILADELPHIA. SATURDAY, SEP'R 21. 1867.

Names.-We do not return rejected manuacripts, unless they come from our regular cor-respondents. Any postage stamps sent for such return will be conficuted. We will not be reeponelble for the safe keeping or return of any manuscript.

OUR NOVELETS.

We commenced on July 27th, a new and fasginating novelet, called

CARLYON'S YEAR.

By the author of " Lost Sir Massingberd,"

Our readers who remember that powerful and need no persussion to induce them to read will perseive, commences in the very first of the bone and tooth forming principles, he it is not to be wondered at, that the Stotch

Back numbers to May 4th, containing the they luxuriate on their dearly beloved cat-mo whole of the powerful novelet of "Loan ULS-WATER," can be had upon application.

We can also supply a few back numbers to the first of the year.

COL. FORNEY'S LETTERS.

We are pleased to see that the interesting lat-ers written from Europe by Col. Forney to the Daily Press, of this city, are to be republished of this city, are to be reported a por-The volume will contain a por-I had Press, or this city, are to be repudding to book form. The volume will contain a portrait of Col. Forney, engraved on steel, and will be issued in excellent style by Messre. T. B. Pe terson & Brothers. We may add that the letters will be carefully revised, and will also have various additions made to them.

HYACINTHS AND TULIPS.

Now is the time to plant these favorite spring flowers. Mr. Vick, the Rochester florist, offers a splendid assortment. He says: - "My impor-tations from Holland this year I think have never been equalled for richness, variety, and extent. The bulbs sold by me last cesson gave, n almost every case, the most perfect satisfac tion as I learn from several thousands of letters received this Spring. The exhibition on my own grounds was most magnificent, and was visited by tens of thousands. Nothing in the floral world can equal the dazzling brilliancy and gorgeousness of a bed of good tulips. Those who are acquainted only with the comm alipe seen in the country, know nothing o character of a good tulip, or the magnificence a mass of these superb flowers. Any good garden soil will answer for the tulip.

I shall be prepared to commence sending out bulbs by the 25th of September, and will continue to fill all orders received up to the 1st of December."

MAIZENA AND SATIN GLOSS STARCH.

We have tried in our family these articles, manufactured by Mr. William Duryea, and can recommend them to our readers as being of ex-ellent quality.

The Satin Gloss Starch is reported to us as stifting in its use the claims made for it of urity, exceeding whiteness, and apparent free-om from deleterious ingredients.

The Maizena also is regarded as being a first-rate article-prepared with care and fidelity We are not surprised to learn therefore, that both of these articles have recently obtained at the Paris Exposition the highest premium which is awarded to productions of the kind. Any one wishing to obtain these articles, should address Mr. Willism Duryes, of the Gler Core Malrana and Satin Gloss Starch Works, 166 Folton street, New York.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE HOUSE ELEMENT IN THE INSPIRATION OF SACRED SCRIPTURES. By T. F. CURTIS D. D. Clat. Professor of Theology in the University at the Lewisburg Penn. The author says in his pre-lace.—"For many years I conscientiously and that he shall do snything further in the maintain the current the ter than what is herein indicated.—Washington wies of the Intallicitity of Scripture Inspiration | Correspondent of Philadelphia Ledger, ntil all possibility of doing so resonably and conestly was gote. Only very slawly, unwil on it necessarily involves in the experimental parts of Christian Theology, while yet giving them a progressive tendency and movement incalculable to those who like myself have Bervatism, except as shaken from its cloth lar force, be preached an elequent sermo as his text our Saviour's beautiful word which I see inevitable on this subject may take place quietly in the Estangelical Churches of our with an increase of gentleness, charity, earnest ness and zsal." Published by D. Appleton & Co. New York; and also for sale by D. Ash-

THE PRINCIPLES OF BIOLOGY, By HERBERT SPENCER, author of "Social Statios," Ac. Vol. 2. Interesting and cogent, as everything that Mr Spencer writes is. Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York; and also for sale by D.

Mir and Wispon or Don Quinous Pab-

Hone Life, a Jounnal. By Entrankin M. Sewell, author of "Amy Herbert," An. This is a story which has been written with the wish to illustrate not only a few fundamental principles of Education, but also the difficulties and disappointments attendant upon the endeavor to carry them out under ordinary circumstances.

Will now offer you a feather edge, silver-steeled

by D. Ashmead, Philada.

The Physiology of Man; Designed to Represent the Existing State of Physiological Science,

New Orleans.

Br Austin Flint, Jr. M. D., Professor of Mi-croscopy and Passiology in Bellevoe Hospital Medical Callege, New York, No. Published by Appleton & Co. New York; and also for sale

THE CONFRIGNS OF GREADS ESTOODER. By FLORENCE MARRIAT: Published by Loring, Boston; and also for sale by G. W. Pitcher, Philada. Price 75 cents. BASSLED SCREMES Published by Loring, ton ; and also for sale by G. W. Pitcher, Pollada. Price 75 cents.

Mesic — "Shelling Green Pean" A Humorous Sung. By Gao, Thomas Published by Louis

Meyer, 1230 Cheetnut street, Philads.

Course Brend. It is well known among physicioglate that the teeth and bones are durable and strong in pro-portion as they contain one of the chemical constituents of hars, and that the food which contains these constituents in large quantities is best adapted to the formation of good teeth Our readers who remember that powerful and and strong limbs. In the item of uread, used peculiar story, "Lost Sie Maisingberd," will in every family, a striking fact is exhibited; in 500 pounds of the finest flour for table use there are thirty pounds of these bone forming "Carlyon's Year"—the interest of which, they elements; in an equal amount of bread made of the whole what, there are eighty-five pounds the thriftlest and hardiest race in the world, for gruel, bread and cakes torce times a day. The whole grain of Indian corn or wheat prepared as recommended does not fatten as much as fine flour, the latter having twice the amount of fat-forming principle; but fat is not strength; it does not give endurance, toughness, bardness, capability of work; the whole grain of the Infteen, children a louid be compelled to make one daily meal, wholly, of one of these grains, prepared as above.—Hall's Journal of Health

> The Disadvantage of Being an American Americans are acquiring in foreign countries s reputation for lavish expenditure which some-times operates to our disadvantage. A corres-pondent in Naples writes as follows: "It is very unfortunate to speak the English language. An swering a question of an American yesterday at dinner cost me a franc, which was moderate. I waiter was not very well versed in that lanusge, he took me for a Frenchman; but the English language was the signal for an advance in my bill. A few days ago I went into a cameo shop and asked in French the price of a minia-ture, and was told thirty frames. I went ten paces further, and asked in Euglish the price of the same thing, and was told sixty france. gentle reader-all readers are gentle-if you ever expect to visit this continent, begin to study French and German now; when the shores of America fade to the distance, speak your last word of English till your return.

> A SINGULAR TRACE .- Montana advices state that an exploring party, which has been to the head waters of the Yellow Stone river, has just returned, and reports seeing one of the greatest wonders of the world. For eight days they travelled through a volcanic country, emitting a blue flame and living streams of brimstone. The country was smooth and rolling, with long level plains intervening. The summits of these rolling mounds were craters, from four to eight feet in diameter, and everywhere in the levels were smaller craters, from four to six inches in di-ameter, from which streamed a blaze and coustant whistling sounds.

> The hollow ground resounded beneath their feet as they travelled, and every moment seemed to break through. Not a living thing was even in the vicinity, and the explorers gave it the significant name of "Hell."

be a general belief that the President will issue instructions to the district commanders to open up registration in the Southern states. I have ed authority for saying that Mr. Johnson will do no such thing.

As etated before in these despatches, the President will advise district commanders to fix a uniform day for elections in all the districts. Under the Reconstruction law resistration is to be opened fourteen days before the election.

This will give an opportunity for those who and the President does not regard it necessary

In a parish church on the west quart of Son lingly, and sgainst every earthly preposession and interest, have I felt obliged to relinquish ed to the comice of the upper woodwork of the long cherished and early opinions in respect to palpit. The birds having discovered that there this point. And I wish here only to express my was ready ingress and egress by a small move able pane in one of the windows left open du ring the summer for ventilation, took advantage of the circumstance. On a recent Sunday the minister admirably improved the occasion; for, in fact, a new life and vividness, of | with special reference to the circumstances, the swallows flying in and out with a homely twitter ever prone to settle down into an excessive that made every aliusion to them tell with particureatism, except as smarth to the med and as his text our Saviour's beautiful words, and not to involve controversy among Christon to involve contr

and, without strife and bitterness, but marked which will never get hurt by falling-it always falle so slow. He means flour.

Instead of Prideaux's Connexion, the Highland cotters of the present day pre'er Spurgeon's Sermons, which are now to be found, translated into Gaello, in the remotest glens of the Highlands.

The Farielan carloaturist, Cham, has on of an attendant at a senside bathing place, with a woman under his care. The attendant is represented as saving: " Now ugly she is! Sap should let her go; she can't swim; sh lished by D. Appleton & Ca., New York; and would be drowned; perhaps her husband would be grateful!" be grateful!"
The Davenport brothers are performing in Berlin as simple jugglers, the authorities having refered to grant them a license for a performance by any other name.

A "Cheap John" in New York cells and among ordinary people. Published by D. razor. I guarantee that if you take it home Appleton & Co., New York; and also for eale and put it under your pillow, you will find your-

Jenny Lind, and Otto's " Ruth."

A London critic writes :- "If the attraction of the once famed "Swed-ight nightingale" is no longer at the fever height of the mad epoch in which her easy was overwhelming, there is still sufficient curiosity on the part of the rising generation to hear an arists on whom the old opers and oratorio frequenters dilated with such enthusiasm. To many who heard Jenny Lind in her best days the pre-sent exhibition is a sad one. There is nothing, in feet, more distressing than the decay of a great artist. There are amateurs who recollect the night at Covent Garden theatre when the elder Kean played Othello to the lago of his son Charles Kaan. The great tragedian sank ex-hausted just after he had delivered the cylebrated 'Farewell' lines. The appearance of the beautiful Falcon on the stage of the Grand Opera House in Paris, as Rachel in Haldry's 'Juive,' when her voice deserted her, will never escape the recollection of those who were pre ant. The return of Pasta after her organ, never yery good, was rained, was another melancholy enhibition. Even recently, Grisi's return to Her Majesty's Theatre, as Lucrezia Borgia, must be added to the list of distressing somes of artistic ambition overlasping itself. To these reminiscences the festival-frequenter will have to add the almost tragical incident of last Wednesday, when Jonny Lind stood in the Cathedral, on the orchestral platform, struggling against nature, easaying to force out tones no longer at her com-mand, showing the intellect unimpaired, but the voice utterly destroyed. A young Welsh girl in her very professional teens was heard in the finale of the first part, to prove that youth will have its turn; and the freeh sympathetic tones of the vocalist was palpably a relief to the auditory, who seemed to draw breath, and to inhale the clear and brilliant notes of Miss Edith Wynne in the Mirrole of the Rain in the 'Elijah, as a contrast to the spasmodic cries of a tone

Nor was the 'Elljah' the only mortification destined for the singer whose re-appearance was based on motives which must be respected. She was prepared to risk a great reputation as a singer in order to give fame to her husband as a composer; but, truth to state, 'Ruth' is an utter failure. Not even a success d'estime can be accorded to Herr Otto Goldschmidt. A more thoroughly unvocal composition, with more ugly orchestration, we never heard. Its duliness and its dreariness are indescribable, despite of a really oleverly arranged book by Mr. George Grove, the only fault of the libretto being superabundance of recitatives, as will be seen by the outline of the numbers printed in week's Queen. It cannot be conceived how Herr Goldschmidt could have so mistaken his vocation. He does not seem to understand part writing or the laying out of an orchestra The choralists were in deepsir at their ungrateful parts; the instrumentalists grouned at their discordants sounds; nothing seemed to mix-the oordane sounds; nothing seemed to mix—the judicious and harmonious blending of voices with the instruments was wanting. Then, as to individuality of style, the Sacred Pastoral is neither fish, flesh, nor fowl; it is neither eacred nor secular; it is judiar when it should be serious, trivial when it should be seiemn; but, worse than all, it is souliess. There is no heart in the music. Neither the maternal affection of Naomi, nor the pious and fills! scion of Ruth. Naomi, nor the pious and filial action of Ruth, have inspired the componer. A theme replete with tenderness has been treated by crude amateurship frigidly as ice. The music is as dry as the stick with which the conductor heats his

The only daughter of Spotted Tail, the celebrated Indian Chief, is named Lizzie Enphemia Pocshontas. She is "finishing her educa-tion" at Omaha. She is learning to sing in Italian and play the piano.

Time, in order to keep up with the progress of the age, is said to have abandoned the scythe and the hour-glass, and purchased a sewing machine and a watch.

By an act of the Nebraska Legislature, passed June 24, 1867, women of lawful age are allowed to vote at the district echool meetings. The first election under the law will be held in

When I did well, I heard it never; when id ill. I heard it over.

There are ice caves in Oregon. The ice whole supply from an immense cavern in the White Salmon River.

It is delightful to climb up these hills, wi young man to help you in the steep places, eat a luncheon with you on the summit." is evidently a roung lady of taste and experier.

1: le a rule with the banks to pay ! necks at the counter unless the pers ing the same is known to the teller, beck was presented at the counter of one or Boston banks recently, on the back of which was a description of the "person presenting to same," as follows, viz : "Sixty years old, grahair, blue coat, gray pants and vest, spees, blue cotton umbrella." Suffice it to say the check was paid and no questions asked

Economy at Long Branch, according to lady visitor, consists in bringing only thirty dieses, two lace shawls, four paracols, five round hate, and three boxes of gloves. Lucy Stone once said, "There is cotton n the ears of man, and hope in the bosom of coman." Lucy made a mistake, and got the Recoive on that course of life which is pet excellent, and habit will render it the most delightful. The more we help others to bear their ens, the lighter our own will be. Numerous railroads in Europe are trying the experiment of iron cross-ties instead of sooden elsepers. The rails are embedded nine inches deep in gravel, which it is claimed will give them sufficient stability.

Formerly, when negroes voted in New y, a candidate sent an old negro preacher two barrels of nice potatoes. Next meeting day he exported his herers on the duty of voting, and the difference between whigs and democrate, the told the story of the receipt of the potatoes, and added: "My bredren, some tell you to vote for de whige, some tell you to vote for de dea crate, but I tell you to vote where you get de taters!"

SKASIDE DRAMATICS.—Bland Old Bachelor.—" Spending the summer down here, sir!"
Bluff Old Patertamilias.—" Ne, sir, not spending the summer; spending greenbacks, sir, at the rate of five a minute."

The Beauty of Flowers.

Most people have yet to learn the true enjoy-ment of life, it is not fine dresses, or large houses, or elegant furniture, or rich wines, or gay parties, that make homes happy. Really, wealth connot purchase pleasures of the higher sort; these purchase pleasures of the higher sort; these depend not on money, or money's worth; it is the heart, and taste, and intellect, which deter mine the happiness of men; which give the seewhich man is little better than a walking clothes

A snug and a clean home, no matter how A wang and a crean nome, no matter now thay it be, so that it be wholesome; windows, into which the sun can shine obserily; a few good books (and who need be without a few good books in these days of universal chespnuest) -no duns at the door, and the cupboard well supplied, and with a nosegay of flowers in your room!—and there is none so poor as not to have about him the elements of pleasure

Hark! there is a child passing our window calling "wallflowers!" We must have a bunch forthwith. A shower has just fallen, the pearly drops are still hanging upon the petals, and they sparkle in the sun which has again come out in his beauty. How deliciously the flower smells of country and nature! It is like summer coming icto our room to greet us. The wall-flowers only last night were looking up to the stars from their native stems; they are full of buds yet, with their promise of fresh beauty.

buds yet, with their promise of fresh heauty.

But what do you say to a nosegay of roses?

Here you have a specimen of the most beautiful of the smiles of Nature! Who, that looks on one of these bright, full-blown beauties, will say that she is sad, or sour, or puritanical? Nature tells us to be happy, to be glad, for she decks herself with roses; and the fields, the skies, the hedgerows, the thickets, the green lanes, the dells, the mountains, the merning and evening sky, are robed in loveliness. The "laughing flowers!" exclaims the poet; but there is more flowers! exclaims the poet; but there is more than gayety in the blooming flower, though it takes a wise man to see its full significance—there is the beauty, the love, and the adaptation, of which it is full.

What would we think or say of one who had What would we think or say of one who had invented flowers—supposing, that before him, flowers were things unknown; would it not be the paradise of a new delight?—should we not hail the inventor as a genius, as a god? And yet these lovely offsprings of the earth have been speaking to man from the first dawn of his existence till now telling him of the wordness.

been speaking to man from the first dawn of his existence till now, telling him of the goodness and wisdom of the Creating Power, which bade the earth bring forth, not only that which was useful as food, but also flowers, the bright, consummate flowers, to clothe it in beauty and joy! See that graceful fachela, its blood-red petals, and calyx of bluish-purple, more exquisite in color and form than any hand or eyes, no matter how well skilled or trained, can imitate! We can manufacture no colors to qual these of on. can manufacture no colors to equal those of our flowers in their bright brilliancy—such, for instance, as the scarlet lychnis, the browallis, or even the common poppy. Then see the exqui-site blue of the humble Speedwell, and the dexxing white of the Star of Bethlehem, that shines even in the dark. Bring one of even our com-mon field flowers into a room, place it on your table or chimney-piece, and you seem to have brought a ray of sunshine into the place. There is ever cheerfulness about flowers; what a delight are they to the drooping invalid; the very sight of them is cheering; messengers from the country without, and seeming to say:—"Come and see the place where we grow, and let thy heart be glad in our presence."

What can be more inpocent than flowers? Are they not like children undimmed by sin? They are emblems of purity and truth, always a They are emblems of purity and truth, always a new source of delight to the pure and the inno-cent. The heart that does not love flowers, or the voice of a playful child, is one that we should not like to consort with. It was a beau-tiful conceit that invented a language of flowers, by which lovers were enabled to express the feelings that they dared not openly speak. But the wers have a voice to all—to old and young to rich and poor, if they would but listen, and try to interpret their meaning.

Have flowers in your room, then, by all means! If you can have them for your window also, so much the better. What can be more delicious than the sun's light streaming through or scarlet geraniums? Then to look out into is in columns or pillars, and Portland gets its whole supply from an immense cavern in the White Salmon River.

A young lady who is up among the White Salmon River, which is up among the White Salmon River.

The Analysis of the salmon River is the salmon River.

The Analysis of the salmon River is the salmon River.

The Salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River.

The Salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River.

The Salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River is the salmon River.

The Salmon River is the salmon River. Etains, writes to a friend, confidentially :- | eweet peas, then you have the most beautiful frame you can invent for the picture without whether it be the busy crowd, or a distant landscape, or trees with their lights or shades, or the charges of the passing clouds. Any one may old song. And what a pure taste and refinement not indicate on the part of the culti-

> Flowers in your window sweeten the air, make your room look graceful, give the sun's light s nature and beauty. You really cannot be also nature and beauty. You really cannot be also-gether alone if you have sweet flowers to look ipon; and they are companions which will never beautiful and smiling. Do not despise them because they are cheap, and because everybody may have the luxury as well as you. Common things are cheap, and common things are invariably the most valuable. Could we only have fresh air or sunshine by puschase, what luxuries would be; but they are free to all, and we think not of their blessings.
>
> There is, indeed, much in nature that we do not yet half enjoy, because we shut our avenues of sensation and of feeling. We are satisfied with the matter-of-fact, and look not for the entrit of fact, which is above ali. If we we open our minds to esjoyment, we should find tranquil pleasures spread about us on every side.

We might live with the angels that visit us on every sunbeam, and sit with the fairles who wait on every flower. We want some loving know-ledge to enable us truly to enjoy life, and we require to cultivate a little more than we do the art of making the most of the common means and appliances for enjoyment which lie about There are, we doubt not, us on every side. many who may read these words, who can enter into and appreciate the spirit of all that we have now said; and, to those who may still b we would say—begin and experiment forthwith; and, first of all, when the next flower-girl comes along your street, at once hall her, and "Have a few flowers for your room!"

A travelling "tooth eleaner" was ar-"Tonsorial Palace" is the sign over one of our hair-dressing saloone. Is it called so be making foolish people's teeth white with muricasse there are so many crowns dressed there?

A Word on Cricket

PROM A LONDON PERIODICAL.

The batting has beaten the howling, say the wisearcs. But is the bowling as good as it way, and is cricket better than the cricket of a quarter of a century ago? The best test of the question is to compare the scores in two great matches—taking for examples the match between Kent and England in 1839, and the match between Kent and Surrey played in July, between Kent and Surrey played in July, 1867.

The elevens in each of these years included some of the finest players in England, and both matches extended ever three days. In the Kent and England match, one thousand and sixty-seven balls were bowled for four hundred and sixteen runs, one hundred and twelve oversbeing maidens. In this match, all the wickets fell, Kent winning by two runs. In the Kent and Surrey match of this year, fifteen hundred and sixty-four balls were bowled, one hundred and sixty-four balls were bowled, one hundred and sixty-sight overs being maiden, and thirtyaty-eight evers being maiden, and thirty wickets fell for six hundred runs.

Taking the proportion of maidees overs out of the number of balls bowled, there is little or no difference between past and present cricket, though is one respect the bowling of 1867 cou-trasts favorably with that of 1889, there being only one "wide" in this year's match, whereas, in the olden time, there were twelve wides out of a less number of balls.

Comparing the batting in the two matches, the average per wicket, not counting the "not outs," was ten rune a wicket in 1889, against ighteen a wicket in 1867.

The wiseacres are, to a great extent, right The batting is stronger than formerly, and it may be accounted for very easily. In the first place, railways have increased cricket ten-fold, and players of eminence, instead of appearing, as they did formerly, two or three times a year on a country ground, may be met with daily on any cricket ground in England. The good bowlers have no longer a monopoly of their art cricket to them has become a regular calling and one or more of their order may be found in every large public school and university club ground, and in many private clubs, and the re-sult is that when an amateur finds himself placed on the list of his county, he is quite as much at home on a public ground as he is on his village

Referring to the "Siege of the Wicket," which is the same size, and subject to all the same dangers now as it was twenty five or thirty years ago, let us see how it is that scores are so nuch longer than formerly.

There are a few reasons which seem to ac count for the batsman's success in the present day. The majority of the players have known hardly anything else but round arm bowling and the slow under-hand, and the general use of leg the slow under-hand, and the general use of leg pads and gloves has given them a great advantage as regards leg hitting, and playing what is called the Cambridge or Harrow "poke." Mr. Alfred Mynn was, I believe, the originator of this style. When the round arm bowling deprived the bateman of the "draw" to a great extent, Mr. Mynn would lift his left leg as high as he could, and granding his right les with the as he could, and guarding his right leg with the bat, place the ball square with the wicket, or him, according to the position of the field. This was not a very elegant performance, but it was effective. The "on poke" has now become very popular with goed players; it re-quires no small amount of pluck (if the bowling is fast), and great accuracy of eye. The player must look the ball straight in the face without flinching, and keep his bat as straight as a line, as he is in deuble danger of leg before wicket and a nasty body blow. Nothing bullies a bowler and the field more than this "poke," if well done, particularly if the batsman can hit hard as well, as he has the opportunity of get-ting two of the field close to him on the one eide, and will probably find a large space un-guarded, if he can get hold of a drive. Another cause of the long scores is the excellence of the cricket grounds of the present day. A good wicke: now is as true as a billiard table, and is all egainst the bowler and in favor of the bat, and, moreover, the ground will not wear out, as it used to do formerly, owing to want of prepa-

Now as regards the bowling. It is treason to cay so, but I firmly believe it is not so good as formerly, speaking of the very best. The slow overhead and overhand throw which is now occasionally seen in the south, and the childish atpitch a ball ten feet in the sir, on the chance of its falling on the bails, would have n secuted by the brave reomen of Kent. Surrey, Sussex, and Hants, twenty-five years sgo. I much doubt whether such bowlers as Alfred Myon, Hillyer, Lillywhite, Cobbett, and Red. gate, who all played in 1839, can be seen in any one match now. Redgate bowled Stearman, Faller Pilch and Alfred Mynn, in one over and they were three of the finest players in England. bowling then was real round arm bowling, and the hand was obliged to be kept below the shoulder. For accuracy old Lillywhite and Hillyer were never surpassed, and both of them had the credit of pitching a ball just where they pleased. Cobbett also was very true. Redgate was very elegant in his delivery, and very deadly also. He took a long run before delivery, and the pace was tremendous. Both he and Mr. Myu. bowled the purest round arm bowling possible, with the arm straight out, the difference being that Redgate ran to the wicker and Mr. A. Mynn marched about six paces and awang the ball in, pulling himself short up on his left foot. Tarrant, Wooton, Grundy, and Greenwood most resemble the bowlers of the past; but it may fairly be said that there has never been a second Lillywhite, Hillyer, Redgate, or Alfred Mynn.

No doubt the present is as straight as any bowling since round-hand was invented, but there is a very great doubt whether the fashion-able over-hand, and sometimes over-head, style is so effective as the true round arm. There are the ball down with the hand in a line with a wicket, without any break or spin on the ball to one bowler who delivers the ball with the hand below the shoulder and the arm well out from the body. The pounding bowling is very true to the wicket, but very simple to play, whereas the lower delivery causes the bal spring directly it touches the ground, and if the wicket is dead, it very often shoots

Again, comparing the past with the present, terest than formerly, owing to their frequency The easy access to London enables the country to see all the cricketing notorieties some time, on one of the Lundon grounds, and there is great eameness in the style of batting Twenty or thirty rears ago people would go any distance to see Pilch, Mann, Felix, Lilywhite, ing to get rid of them.

Mr. Taylor, Box, Wenman, Guy, Redgate, and "How the Lady Joan kept her Vow." elle Bay: here those who followed saw a fearful others, but now there are few individual players who will draw many to see themselves specially When Dearman, the Yorkshireman, challenged all England at single wicket, and Mr. Alfred Mynn obesed his call, there were five thousand people on the Town-Malling ground, in Kent, before eleven o'clock in the morning; and when Mr. Mynn went to Sheffield to play the return match, the coach by which he tra-velled was mobbed at every town through which it passed along the North Road. And he man worth seeing, as he was the handsomest and noblest cricketer in the world. He won by a hundred and twelve runs in the first match, and in one inninge, with thirty-six runs to spare, in the return.

Batting and averages occupy the thoughts of the present cricketers a great deal more than formedly. They don't recken how many runs they have lost owing to eatches missed, and balls badly fielded. They do not look on themselves as members of a small army, who are fighting against another army on equal terms, ngiting sgainst another army on equal terms, and they are apt to go away before the match is over, and get a man to field for them if they have had the great desideratum—their innings. These remarks de not apply to all cricketers, but to far too many. "Self" has taken a strong hold on cricket, and public cricket too often looks as if it was contracted for at so much per day. A captain is not what a captain used to be. The average mania is as fatal to cricket as be. The average mania is as tatal to cricks as the trade unions are to commerce, and Jones, and Brown, and Robinson go about playing la scratch teams, in matches in which they have no interest beyond their innings; and if a captain puts either of them in last man, they think themselves body used, whereas if they had gone in early they would probably have slipped away by a train which started an hour before the time for leaving off. Although all these drawbacks are bad for ricket, still on the whole, the game is general is much better now than formerly, but as re-gards the very best public cricket, I cannot see, after a thirty years' experience, anything done better new than in days gone by. Certainly the bowling is not better; and the wicket-keeping of Mr. Jenzer, Bex, and Wenman, without pade or gloves, was a feat which I much doubt any man of the modern day being able to do, although the men of this day are very good. may safely be said that no amateur has ever surpassed, if he has equalled, the play of Mr. Felix, Mr. Taylor, or Mr. Mynn; or that any professional has excelled Pilch, Guy, Wenman, Dorrington, and a host of others who flourished

Looking again to the fielding, the present age cannot show better professional fielding than that of the old school, though as regards the amateur cricketers, the improvement is very marked. The fielding of the Marylebone Club marked. against Surrey, at the Oval, in the present year, nessed in cricket; and as a rule, the fielding is the great feature in the Oxford and Cambridge

But, reverting to the professional players, it certainly is the case that we see players some-times in county matches, who are put in for their batting, and who in the field make a regular muddle of the game, being neither able to throw, eatch, or step a ball. This was not the case in days of yore. The question whether the field were equal to watch out against the slow howling, would never have been asked then, as it is now sometimes. One of the chief requires the field were equipped to the chief requirements of the chief requirements. sites for a cricketer was being a good fielder, and if he was not, he would have had no chance of playing for his county.

Taking oricket for all and all, there is not much fault to find with it in 1867. It has grown more, and picked up fewer faults in its rapid growth, than most sports. Shooting—that is, old-fashioned shooting—has been totally altered for the worse; but village greens are much as village greens were, and squire and peasant meet on equal terms on the time-hallowed turf, and steady old men at by and smoke their pipes, and say—as I am saying now—that as good cricket existed in their time, as in ours; proving the truth of the old saying, "Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona.

bliss of courting? You didn't! Then you had better get a little gal-an-try.

Dio Lewis has taken the "Pond House," on the Lexington Railroad, some five miles from Boston, and will reopen his school there on the 25th instant. He says in a letter that his have endeavored to remain awake, that I might beautiful home is in ashee, but God willing, in unravel the mystery; but in vain: I invariably e year from this date I shall resume operations n Lexington on an extended scale."

A young man from Vermont, who went out on a salling party recently and became a victim to see sickness, describes the sensation thus: "The first neur I was sivaid I shouldn't."

Henry Smith, of Whitestone, Long Island, accidentally dropped a cup into a cin-tern recently, and while fishing for it, he hooked fast to the clothing of his little boy who had been missing for an hour or two. This was the first intimation the father had that the boy was

The Executive Committee of the South ern Relief Association held a final meeting in New York last week. The total contributions for Southern aid have reached nearly $3,000,000 including $378,000 expended by direction o Joogrees out of the Freedmen's Ruresu appro-

The days of superstition, it appears, are steps, Lady Joan stepped in

The days of sepiretition, it appears, at a content of the line of yet numbered. It is amounced that is Troy there is no old woman of seventy who pretends to "rell fortunes," and a few days superstanding the crowd around her residence was so great that the police had to interfere and break it up.

The New York Tribune says that were "Not too near," and Dick, ising on his oars:

"Not too near," and Dick, ising on his oars:

"Not too near," and Dick, ising on his oars:

"Not too near," and Dick, ising on his oars:

The New York Tabute says that were

A LEGEND OF LYMINGTON.

What can a young lassie, what will a young What can a young lamie do wi' an auld man?

In spite of this assertion, many a "young lassie" has been well content to marry an " auld man;" provided always there has been plenty of tocher on the right of fur So it was that Samuel Baldwin, Kuight, and sejourner in the parish of Lymington, did, in the year of grace, 1730, find a young and beautiful bride. Tracition passess over the history of their married life in ominous silence. Suffice it, that when Sir Samuel died there was found a curious paper, stating it to be his will and pleasure that his body should be carried out to Scratchells Bay, and there sunk. 'In order," the document went on to ear, " that my wife, Joan, may not be able to dance upor my grave, which, in the bitterness of her wrath, she has vowed to do."

In obedience to this singular command, the worthy knight's body was only weighted and left to rest under the shadow of the Needles; while the young widow took entire possession of the dead man's property, no one disputing the will which she produced. Now the Lady Joan Baldwin looked marvellously fair in her weeds; and, although it is said that it is of no use gilding pure gold, every-day experience proves that there are exceptions to the rule; therefore, fair as the widow was, the gilding derived from the funds made her doubly fair, and brought to her feet the greedy, the neely, the rich, the poor. Time went on, and to the disappointment of the gessiping world Ludy Joan secund in no haste to change her condition, but the rather to aim at universal conquest. The ladies grew not only soundalous but wrath, for so equally were Joan's favors distributed that every man scoretly considered him self the most fortunate, and thus, there being no rejected suitors, there were no deserters, and the wrathful indignation of the neglected sisterhood was the more excusable. Things went on after this fashion until a bunting meeting came off Lyndhurst was full of great noblemen. The rouse. The hunt lasted for several days, and when the festivities were at a height an event occurred that put the place on the qui vive.

At the close of a long and successful day in the forest, a stranger rode home at the widow's bridle hand.

"Some Lymington fellow," said the Lon-

"Some court roud," said the Lymington folk Yet, though unknown to the lady's jealous followers, the stranger was evidently not only on good, but familiar, terms with the widow; who, in place of remaining the night at Lyndhurst, rode on to Lymington, escorted by the new ar rival. Next day, there was rage and amaze ment in many a heart. Lymington church bells clanged a joyous wedding peal. The widow had

Disappointed suitors let loose their tongues and out of very spite hunted up the fact that the man who had cutdone them all and carried off the prize, was on old lover, to whom, before she was "my lady," Joan Armitage had plighted her troth, and who, they asserted, had remained in the neighborhood disguised as a forester, no-thing loth to wait for the knight's well tochered widow. Nor was this all darker sorten were widow. Nor was this all : darker stories were whispered, and at last it was even hinted that the knight had met his death unfairly, and that the settlement and will by which the widow claimed her great wealth was forged by the myeterious lover. Joan heard of these things, and only laughed. "I married for money once, I can marry for love this time." Yet in spite of the boasted love, and the constant presence of the man she had chosen, a great change became visible: the bright color faded out of her checks; har eyes graw sunken and dim; her isingh hushed; life and energy seemed to be fading away. The bridegroom, too, was a changed man: he because silent and morose; scarcely ever left his wife's side; and watched her with a persinacity which the lookers on called jealousy. Some said Lady Joan was con-science smitten; some said her husband illleader! did you ever enjoy the costatic | treated her; both reports were as far from the ruth as such generally are. It was only to a onen friend that the unhappy man unbosomed himself.

"Night after sight," he said, "I wake and fancy my friend was of the poet's opinion, and behold her place vecant. Night after night I might have justly said fall asleep, and when morning comes Joan is lying by my side, and were it not that her face in pale and haggard, and her feet out travelstained, I could believe I had been have questioned the Lady Joan, of conve?" said his friend.

"Not a word, Dick."
"Then, why not wate" her?"

"Ay, that is it! I want you to help me. Do you consent to lie in walt this very night, and we will follow her?"

So It was arranged. Dick Be kley was waltthe street, when a prtly after the church to led twelve, the house door epened, and the Lidy Join, clad only in her white might-dress, tripped down the steps. Dick had always been an admirer of the ladder; but he stood amazed exceedingly as he caught right of face, lighted up with a gleam he had never eccu before; her long hair floating, Godiva like, in The Boston Journal tells of a lady at the wind, but fair arms stretched over her head, Seratoga who, "having decided to return by the middle of September, has begun to send her in agony. There was something so extraordings ge in instalments. See will accompany the last car load herealt." -concething so wild and pushionate in her atti-tude and expression-that Dick's heart was The great dry goodsman up town is said tude and expression—that Dick's heart was a resemble young Norval's father whose "only stricken, and although he nesitated for a moare was to increase his store."

It seems probable that a new system of pledged his word to follow her, and so he went, beliefraph construction will soon be adopted generally in England. The wires are to be laid the High street, and through the ill-paved byen. serial to Legand.

side by side in tubes buried under the bed of a lance, leading to the so called quay. As she aprailway, each being exparately insulated in a proached, a small boat, with one boatman, globed up the river, and as it grated against the

The water was as smooth as glass, but bright with a lurid, weird-like flame; and upon it danced the Ludy Juan, filling the air with her shricks, while all the time, round and round, silding, curtacying, bounding, she performed her ghastly minuel.

At hour, which seemed an age to the lookers on, passed. Held by some strange power they still sat, watching with staring eyes, and curdling blood, until the white taken back into the boat, and rowed to shore

Not one word passed between the friends but next day Joan's husband set off on a jour ney to London, where he meant to lay the mys terious case before eminent doctors, both spirit ial and physical, in the hope of obtaining re ease from his devil-possessed wife. Not so Dick Berkley. That love is capricio and, moreover, covers a multitude of sine, we all know. The glamor was over poor Dick, who was so passionately enamored of Lady Joan, that he even envied the devil the pleasure of ferrying her to her nightly task; and Lady Joan, who had grown weary of the evil tempter, and surveillance of her husband, proved herself nothing loth to accept Dick's homage. And Dick, finding the lady willing, and the coast clear, made such use of his time that in a week from her husband's departure, Joan had consented to elops with her new lover, and carry off with them all the wealth she could bring to ac-

They embarked in a French sloop, the captain of which agreed to take them to Cherbourg; but, as ill-leck would have it, the ship was be-calmed just beyond the Needles, in the haunted Scratchells Bay.

"I'll be able to keep my vow at last," laughed Lady Joan. "Sir Samuel was buried here; if there is a fiddler among the crew he shall come up, and I shall dance over the old wretch's up, and I shall dance over the old wretch's grave in spite of his queer will."

There was no fiddler; and Dick, who, ever since the wind had fallen so suddenly and left them in the fatal Bay, had been getting more and more frightened, managed to persuade Joan that such an action would be folly, and soon former the harmonic of the harmonic than the person of the property of the pr forgot the horrors of the past in the happiness of the present.

At midalght, Dick, who was still awake, saw his mistrees rise. He rose too; and following her on dook, perceived the same scene and horror he had witnessed before; and as he leaned against the bulwark, the devil prompt-ing him, he thought, "Why not leave her here, and carry off the riches she has robbed the old

No sooner said than done. The breeze, which No sooner said than done. The breeze, which seemed to be waiting for his wish, sprang up; the sails filled, and the sloop began to move through the glancing water. But only for a second: the heavens grew black; thunder pealed; and a fiery bolt, rushing down from the angry clouds, split the ship in two.

Dick found himself floating upon the waves, clinging frantically to a broken mast, not another vestige of the wreck was visible. But there, prirougiting, with streaming hair and gasping pirouetting, with streaming hair and gasping lips, Lady Joan danced her death dance. Dick was sorry for her now, and called to her in his own despair and agony; but she heeded him not. As a long red streak away in the west told of coming day, the shrieks grew wilder and the dance more furious. Higher and higher spread the rosy dawn, until the Needles caught the reflection, and reared themselves like a blood-stained hand. Dick tried to shut his ears; but the frantic shricks would not be drowned. One, at last, came wilder and more horrible than all. The white figure disappeared beneath the waves, now glowing like fire, and the unhappy man was left clinging to the spars, alone upon the wide waters.

Hours after, he was picked up by a passing ship and carried to Ireland, from whence he wrote detailing the circumstances, and announcing his intention of taking holy orders, wherefrom he hoped to obtain absolution and relief.

Such is the Legend of Seratchells Bay; and although I never could succeed in seeing the phantom-dance of the Lady Joan, the old boatman who gave me the history of her fate, as-sured me, that when he was fishing off the Bay, he saw her; and was so frightened, that he drank a whole bottle of rum, and found himself in the morning drifted nearly to Southampton water. I

Truth, they say, lies in a well Why, I vow, I ne'er could see: There it always lay for me.

I. D FENTON.

The process of butter making, says the ientific American, dependa mainie upon physi oal action. The butter is formed in the cream the effect of the charning is simply to the isolated particles into one mass. A high temperature favors the process of softening the globules of butter and rendering them more

As scalping is a somewhat rare explience, Mr. Thompson's sensations are of our siderable interest. He says that when, after sawing and backing about his head for balf an hour, and giving a finishing cut over his left temple, the scalper gave it a jack because it stuck a little, it "just felt as if the whole head was taken right off."

Bayard Taylor is engaged in translating o's Fauet. The Easton (Pa.) Express ears:young girl, about seven years of age, was found in a huckleberry woods, near Lickswaxen, up the country, on Sunday of last week, dead. She had gone out on the Saurday previous to gather berries, and not returning at right, search was instituted. When found, the body was terribly bloated, and had the marks of seventeen stings

Young ladies, if they would have a free, healthy, and youthful appearance, should avoid the following: - Late hours, large crino-line, tight corsets, confectionery, hot bread, cold

Brooklyn technically, as it is practically, and for the husband beside blasses with jestions agitation of the subject, are at length to be nexed to that city, it would have a populsuon of fury, was galaing upon the little boat. "Not united under a single municipal government, 1,700,000, and a territory of nearly circular too near, I say, or they will suspect us; they are Previous to the annexation, Besten was the 1,700,000, and a territory of hearly circular to he

THE COW.

Oh, the cow, the beautiful cow! Nibbling the hay from the fregrant mow; Into the thistle and clover so fresh Poking. Manching. Poking your nose with a sweet relish,

All in a mach Beautiful cow, you will one day be hash!

Oh, the cow, the playful cow! Meeting the pail with a playful bow, Giving it generally all of your milk; Winking and clinking your lashes of silk

And splanher
With frollosome dash: A failure to give it soon settles your hash.

A Brooklyn paper thinks to cut Beecher's hair short and put a modern paper collar on him, and his spectolic appearance would be gone. His large collar is now one of his greatest stocks in trade.

BEAR and forbear." Thus preach the Stele eages, And in two words include the sense of pages; "With patience bear life's certain ills; and, oh! Forbear those pleasures that must end in woe."

A model husband in Wales trundled his ick wife two handred miles in a wheelbarrow to "holy weil" where she could be cured of her

The Austrian Minister of Police has found that tobacco in prisons is a magic aid to discipline. It acts like a miracle. The hardest characters are made mild and obedient, the most wicked almost transformed into saints. This is partly the effect of the sedative and narcotizing influences, partly the dread of being deprived of an accustomed intery and solate. Prisoners dread the deprivation of their accustomed allowance of the weed more than solitary coninement, bread and water, or even the cat-o'

Montana has elected Kavanagh, Democrat, delegate to Congress by 1,500 msjority.
The Legislature is almost wholly Democratic.

A resolution praying the Government to parate the public schools from the Church has m passed by the school teachers sesen

A young man in Switzerland, who, under the name of Miss Dr. Abbotts, from the United States, and under the attire of a woman, has been practicing medicine extensively among the ladies in one of the cantons of Switzerland. He was detected, and much indignation expressed toward him—but he could only be punished for practicing wishout a li-

The New York Times and a Western pa per agree that Mr. Bancroft "would have greatly improved his style by a five years' drill on a first-class newspaper."

EF A man named Teas has married a Miss Cross in St. Louis. He Teased her till she agreed she wouldn't be Cross any more.

R. R. R.-RADWAY'S READY RELIEF.-To be sed on all occasions of pain or sudden sickness Immediate relief and consequent cure for the all-ments and diseases prescribed, is what the Ruller guarantees, to perform. Its motto is plain and sys-tematic: It will surely cure! There is no other remedy, no other LINIMENT, no kind of PAIN-RILan, that will check pale so suddenly and so satisfactory as Rapway's READY RELIEF. It has been horoughly tested in the workshop and in the field, in the counting room and at the forge, among civilians and soldiers, in the parlor and in the hospital one general verdict has come home: " The moment taken integrally according to directions, pain from kind for SpRAINS, or BURNS, or SCALDS, or Curs. CRAMPS, BRUISES, OF STRAINS. It is excellent for CHILBRAINS, MOSQUITO BITES, also STINGS OF POI-APOPLEXY, RHEUMATISM, TOOTHACHE, TIC DOLOU-KIBNESS, &c. Good for almost everything. No family should be without it. Follow direction a speedy cure will be effected. Sold by Druggists. Price 50 cents per bottle.

Take AVER'S SARSAPARILLA to purify the blood and purge out the humors, pimples, belis, and rores which are merely emblems of the rottenness within

Low spirits, declining appetite indigestion and dyspepsia, are speedily exchanged for robust health by the use of these most ersellent medicines. Ma nufactory, He Matden Laur, N. V.

MEARRIA CES.

fil Marriage notices must always be accompassed y a responsible same

On the 3d Instant, by the Rev J S Kennard, fr Evenius M Davis to Miss Farnia M Hass. Mr. Eccentre M. Davis to Miss Farmes M. Hass, both - this city of Aug., by the Rev. Wm. Catheart, for June Dilworth to Miss Ellian Eccentric, other this city.

In Manayank, on the "th Instinat, by the Rev A Culver, Mr. William P. Berson, of Rudborough, On the 4th of July, by the Rev A Manship, fr Wilness B. Rama to Miss Louisa Patterson, of this city.

On the 4th of July, by the Rev A Manship, oth of this city.

On the 2th of the city of the Rev A Manship, oth of this city.

oth of this city
On the zhi of July, 1867, by John G. Wilson, V. J. M., Mr. Gronne Wernar to Miss Martha versus both of this city.
On the 7th Instant, by the Rev. M. D. Kurtz, dr. Charles Parses to Miss Massus M. Mayre, pr Notices of Deaths must always be accompa-ated by a responsible name.

DEATES.

On the 9th Instant, CHARLOTTE COATES, Speil 35 on the 9th instant, SARAH, wife Andrew Blokett, In her 55th year On the 9th Instant, Mrs. Elsian A. Monnis, in her 25th year.
On the 5th Instant, William Shlown, in his 77th.

on the 5th instant, Francis Dimenn, in his 4-th year On the 7th instant, Tarton Induar, in his 51st On the 7th instant, ROSANNA MARLEY, in her 86th

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Unequalled Inducements.

Beantiful Premium Engraving.

The proprietors of the "aldest and test of the work ites' offer unequalted indusements of these who torow the labor of making up clubs, as we as to those who result, as single embeorabers, the full asbeetplies

A arge and locatiful steel | ian engraving, 26 inches long by De inches wide, possessing all the softness an possible charm of Megastint, called

"One of Life's Happy Hours,"

Will be sent grates to every single ($2,50) achier lies Will be sen grate to average an arish. The great or and to every person sending on a rish. The great or pease of this Francism will, we trust, be compensated by a arge instructe of our subscription list. The contents of True Pour shall commit, as hereto

tors, of the very heat original and selected matter that can be procure

STORIES, SKETCHES, ESSAYS, ANECDOTES, AGRICULTURAL ARTICLES, RECKIPTS, NEWS LETTERS, from the best ative and foreign sources, &c., &c., &c.

NEUTRAL IN POLITIOS.

THE POST IS SECURETRELY devoted to Literature, and therefore does not discuss political or sectarias ques-tions. It is a common ground, where all can meet in harmony, without regard to their views upon the points cal or sectarian questions of the day.

TERMS.

Our terms are the same as three of that well known magazine, The Lant's Friend-in order that the clubs may be not be up of the paper and magazine one lossity when so deared and are as follows:

trac copy (with the large Promium Engraving) $2.50 I copy of The Post and I of The Lady's Friend and one engineers.

OUR SEWING NACHINE PREMIUM.

We still continue our offer of a Wheeler & Wilson's o. 3 Sewing Machine, such as Wheeler & Wilson's sell for $55 m, to any sell sending on a list of 20 subscribers at $2.50 seek. We will asse send this Manifold the middle of the wheeler and sixty subscribers and sixty subscribers in the amount of the subscriptors priced if described and we will send any of the higher priced flowing. And we will send any of the higher priced Wheeler & Wilson's Manifold and the higher priced wheeler & Wilson's Manifold and the subscriptors priced wheeler & Wilson's Manifold and the subscriptors of and a continuous princit desired. And we will send as of the higher princit Wheeler A. Wilson's Mahanes, of the inference in price is also remitted, every subscriber on the above Premium lists will receive, in addition to his magazine or paper, a copy of the large Premium engineing, "One of Life's Happy The regular with subscribers do not receive sather count one dollar extra for it. THE PARLES OF MANAZINES Will be sent to different Magrees on . - Incomitting, same at the top of some etter, your post office, county, and state. If possible, recurse a post office order or Pailadelphia. If a post-disc motor council be tad, not a deaft on Phisadelphia. I Now York, regulate to our order. I a deaft cannot te had, and linted States union. Donot and money by the Papers Companies, unless you pay their charge. Address.

HINRY PETERSON & CO.,

No. 319 Welmit Street, Philadelphia [] I Procured copies will be sent postpand on the

THE INDIAN GIRL'S LAMENT.

TAFFR VICTOR HUGO.

Forget? Can I forget the scented breath Of breezes, eighing of these in raine car; The strange awaking from a dream of death, The sudent shall no find the erresping near. Our lines were desclate, but far away I heard thre calling me throughout the day, No me had even thee pass, Trembing I exam, also! Can I to eve?

My maiden charms a good that from my bosom fell, invaling the in my loving arms no regrets, and no targeell! 's mother exec, where waters flaw, role, protec, and peaver

Fings; ? My Cear of being quet I forget?

Finder his weary to the arms I creep. Far from such fire rets, and the palm trees

I could not live. Here let me rest alone. Gal I must tollow nigh; With thee I'm doomed to die,

Never forget! CLEMENT W. SCOTT.

Name to peantiful itself, but still more beis a the empocration; it is not linked, as day is, with only only and our tolls—the business and bettermans of the The surshine bringore mo-and night comes, and with rest If we leave elecp, and ask not of dreams fargett lines, our waking is in solitude, and our emphasized is thought. Imagination has around the midnight; the raves, the silence, the shadows Even in the heart crowled hity, where the moonlight falls be cooned hity, where the moonlight falls be considered and the mind elevated amid the lovel mass of Night's deepest and saillest hours.

A was recommende that, when you are waiking on a rainy day, and see a tall man with out an embrella, you offer him a shelter, and having "taken him in," hang your umbrella spon the hat, and ellinging to the handle, ewing poursel clear of the mud. Of course, he will Memorandum for tedious beaux-N. P. Wills once said, in a private conversation, that a woman would tire of Phubas Apollo bimself the young man hang about the house all the People act first and think afterwards taking care to reconcile their opinions to their

DESERTED.

And the waves were eddying by; And the round, red on wint down in the West, When my lave's loving lips to my lips were

Under the evening sky. Now weeping alone by the river I stray, For my lave has left me this many a day; Left me to droop and die.

As the river flowed then, the river flows still, In ripple and foam and earsy, On by the church, and round by the bill, And under the sluice by the o'd burnt mill, And out to the fading day. But I love it no more, for delight graws cold

When the song is sung and the tale is told, And the heart is given away. O1 river, run fart Of river, run fant! Ol wreds float on to the sea! For the sun has gone down on my be sutiful past

And the hope that like bread on the waters Has drifted away like thee! So the dream it is fled, and the day it is done, And my lips will murmur the name of one

Curiosities of French Duelling.

Who will never come back to me.

According to some authors, duelling is of the very highest antiquity, its origin being ascribed to Calo, in whose invitation to his brother, as given in the French translation: "Let us go forth," they profess to discover the exact terms of a cartel. France, no doubt, borrowed the custom directly from Germany, where first we find the duel regarded as an appeal to heaven Divested of its religious character, the duel becomes the Judicial combat and the wager of hattle, till, losing the sanction of the law, it a river at its modern position as simply an "affair of honor.

The judicial combat became rare in France after the fourteenth content; during a period of ene bundred years, only four examples of it are found. A great blow was given to it in 1385 by the unfortunate result of a duel fought in the presence of Charles VI, and all the court; the judgment of God, as it was implously called, proved unformable to a man who, accounted of a proved unformable erime, procested his innocence, and was there-upon compelled to take his part in a duel order-ed by the parliament. Being conquered, he was hanged on the gallows, which formed a part of the preparations of the hattle-field; but some time afterwards, snother man declared himself the afterward, shother than declared immeri-guilty of the crime which had led to the duel. This was, in fact, the end of the judicial combat. Henceforth, the parliaments systematically re-tured to lemit their ranction to these appeals; and the duel become simply a question of obtain-and the due become simply a question of obsate-ling "satisfaction" for wounded honor. Royalty, however, continued to preside at hos-tile meetings, which induced, were only permitted on formal demand to the king. The sceptre thrown into the avena was the signal for discontinuing the combat; and the most infuriated champion did not afterwards date for his life to strike a blow. One of the ratilest memorable duels took piace in the sixteenth century, be tween lie la Chataign raye and De Guy Chabot, butter known as Jarne. The alteration which led to this duel took place in the reign of Francis I, but it was Henry II, who at last gave the sanction to a dual sefused by his predecessor. Jarnao sent to his adversary a most formidable challenge, calling on him to provide more than thirty kinds of arms for use on horseback as well as on foot, and even named some half-core or more of horses of various breeds, and dif-ferently caparisoned. "Jarnac wants to fight me, mind and purse," was the observation of La Chataignerage, who, nevertheless, by recourse to friends and the king, his good master, managed to friends and the king, bit good master, managed to furnish his centingent to the excessive pomp which decorated the "emptying" of this old quarrel. La Chatalgueraye, who was a notorious awash-buckler, had prepared to celebrate right reyally his expected victory, but he reckonsed mithout his host. The famous "blow of James" brought him, hamstrong, to the ground; and mad with year he dide refusing to admit never to exection any more ducle. There had been such sharp work already, that a writer of the beginning of the seventeenth century states the sumber of gentlemen killed in duels since the first edict against them at six thousand.

A duet, singular as well for its tragic ending as for the moral drawn from it in those days, occurred in the relen of Francis II. Achou and Matas, honting with the king got into a dispute, which they resolved to settle with the sword. Before long Matas sent the weapon of hie advereaid he, "and learn to hold is better another time. Go: I parden you, and let us hear ne more of this, young hot head." While meunt-ing his horse, however, Achon fell on him, and ran him through. Achon's friends were strong at curt, while those of Manas were in diagrace, so that Manas was only regretted and "blamed," eays Brantome, "for that he thus neglected the good fortune which put his enemy at his mercy."

Dorlling had at last got to such a height, that in 1566 it was classed among the worst crimes, and made punishable with feath. But this severity only gave to the practice the awestness of forbidden fruit. Duels were fought on the slightest pretexts, and where they were wanting, on none. In less than twenty years, eight thou sand pardons had been grapted to gentlemen who had killed their adversaries. One day, two duellists crossing the Seine for the purpose of fighting, see others hunting about for bosts in which to follow and prevent the combat. hasten their bostmen, and source on shore, they ery out in chorus: ' Qaick, quick! they're De Geneac persists in fighting two men at once, and to those who try to stop him, he exclaims: most skillful swordsman, but, was blessed by na-

o the help of the others; in which he did right band of assassins, of whom he killed two and will, and showed that with his valor be had no small judgment and feresight!" Bussy d'Amboire, who took advantage of the massacre of sterner sex; witness the exploits of the bett Bertholemen to kil a relation with whom was at law, had, before this exploit, signalized timeelf as a duelflet. A gentleman named St. Prod called his attaction to some X's in a piece of embroidery; Bussy, to bring on a duel, swore they were Y's. On this weighty subject there came off a duel of six on each side. Bussy was wounded, but soon sent another challenge, and even had the sudacity to offer battle to the captain of the king's Guards, sent to stop this second fight. It needed the intervention of the king and his other to put an end to this almost interminable quarrel.

The game went bravely on: from 1589 to 1608, eight thousand duciliate fall; and King Henry IV. would have been only too glad to take his share of the work. "If I were only your friend," he wrote to Duplereis Mornay, and not your king, there is no sword which would more readily come out of its scabbard for you than mine" In this reign, Lagarde Valon had, by his exploits, awakened the envy of another cut-throat, named Bazanez, who ac-cordingly sent to his rival a hat, threatening to come and take it and the new wearer's life at the same time. Lagarde were the hat, and went about seeking Baxxocz whem he did not know by sight. Finding one another at last, the two bravos went to work. A tremendous blow fell right on the top of Bazunez's head—in vsin; the skull was so hard that the sword glanced off The second blow had more effect. "There's for the hat," said Lagarde; "and there for the feather; and here for the band." Bexinex was fast losing blood, but was not done for yet. He rushed on his man, and by main force knocked him down. "Beg for your life!" he cried, as one after the other he dealt Legarde fourteen blows between the neck and the waiet "No! no!" cried Lagarde at each stroke, and with a deeperate effort he hit off half the chin of Raza the pummel of his sword. Wonderful to relate, both survived—one to die some years later in an ambuscade, the other to become the terror even for the easy king, and a new edict of great severity was issued; but the fighting went on all the same, and the king shut his eyes. The manis even increased in the reign of Lunis XIII. We read of two men who get into a hogshead, and there hacked one snother to pieces with knives. Two others, on a simple question of precedence, clasp the left hands, and poinard each other. At length, after law upon law, came out the celebrated edict of 1626, of which such more was to be made by R chelien. Francois de who fired, and carried away the tip of her adver-montmorency. Count of Bouteville, the most sary's car. notorious duellist of that day, could never hear it said of a man that he was brave without at once going off to challenge him. He had fought more than twenty duels. To defy the new edict, he fix-d on the Place Royale, at three o'clock in the afternoon, as the place and time of what was to be his last combat. Richelleu insisted on his execution: "We must cut the throats of these duelliers or of your majesty's edicts:"

so Bouteville died, in spite of all intercession. Edicts and he could, indeed, not well live together. Condemned to death by default before this, he had caused the proclamation to be torn down by force, and pursuit getting hot, had made for the frontier with an escert of two hur-dred armed men. Severe as Richelieu was on duelling granders. severe as richements was on documing grainers, be appears, from the Chronicles, to have been very tolerant of combate among the smaller fry. The Baron d'Aspremont, for example, almost fought three duels in a single day. Beginning in the morning, he killed an adversary, who only contrived to pink him in the leg. Troubled by this wound, the baron, unable to eat at table, amused himself by throwing at his friends pellets of bread, one of which chaired to strike a gentleman, who considered that he had thereby promising to his disarmed adversaries their lives if they would forewear their hopes of salvation; this done, he would cut their throats, that, as he said, he might have the pleasure of killing them body and soul.

Ludovio de Piles and his brother were journeying towards Paris, and arriving at Valence, entered an inu, and asked for supper. The land-lord declared that he had only eggs and cleese. "For whom then, is that spit turning?" "For four officers" "Go and ask them to allow us four officers." "Go and ask them to allow us to join them." This request met with a prompt refusal. Ludovin and his brother supped wretchedly, and went to bed in a room divided from that of the officers by a thin partition only. Ludovic, erraged at the treatment helped met with leading to the control of t had met with, lay wide awake, and heard jests at the expense of the pair who had fared so ill. In the morning, the two brothers started betimes, but before they had gone a league, "I've left my purse behind," cried Ludovic. "Do for the first time from Cardinal Mezarin, who advises him to keep Ludovic out of the way.

whiteg to separate us." A few passes, and both dead. At another time, a madman named holding himself in readiness to act as eccent to and to those who try to stop him, he exclaims: most skillful swordsman, but, was blessed by na-"What! have you sever seen one man against ture with so long a nose, that all his adroiness two? The histories are full of it. Come on both! I'll get myself into the Chrenicles!' multiplied in the immense number of duels he

The mania for duels was not confined to the sterner sex; witness the exploits of the better-balf of Chatsau Gay de Murat. This virago used to appear on horseback in great boots, with her petticoats tucked up, and carrying a sword at her side, and pistole at her saddle-bow. Having a bone to pick with a M. Codieres, she called him out. He "came up smiling," and played about with his sword, till be found that the lady was seriously bent on sending him to the ancestral vault. Changing tactics, he pressed her so hard, avoiding wounds that at last she dropped to the ground through sheer fatigue, and had to cry for quarter. Quarrelling afterwards with some gentlemen, she happened to meet them at the chase, and made preparations to charge. Her groom cried out: "Come off, madam—come off; they are three egainst one." "Never mind," quoth the dame; "no one shall say that I met them without charging them." And charge she did for the last time, for her adversaries had the bad taste to kill her.

In the gallery of femmes vaillantes, La Beau pre holds a foremost place. After an exchange of strong language with Lades Urlis, she rushed away, and came back, bringing two swords. Des Urlis took one, thinking no ill; but La Beaupre pressed her hard, wounded her in the neck, and would certainly have killed her, had not timely

Further on in point of time comes La Maupin. This magnificent swordswoman, had been lightly spoken of by Damesnil, a male fellow-performer at the opera, and, in fact, the cocentricities of her manners afforded wide scope for comment. Determined to have satisfaction, without any waste of words, she dressed up as a man, and waited for Dumeenil as he left the theatre. As soon as he appeared, she touched him with her aword, and bade him draw. Dumes nil, who was not in a duelling humor, tried to sheer off, when La Maupin produced a sick, and laid it lustily about his shoulders, finishing by taking his watch and snuff-box. The next day, the actor was complaining at the theatre of hav-ing been set on by a band of robbers, who had ill-treated and despoiled him. "You lie," broke in the virago; "it was my doing. I thrashed you because you hadn't the heart to accept my of the country into which he withcrew. A linear of his, in this retirement, and his airs: "I you because you hadn't the near to successful only mend my pen with my sword!" eaid he to sallenge; if you want proof, look here at your a poet. "No wonder you write so ill!" was the was the ball in male costume, and managed to was at a ball in male costume, and managed to figlit, and the actress killed the three, one after the other.

Another singular affair was the duel between the Marquise de Nelee and the Comtesse de Polignac, in the Bois de Boulogne. The former proposed pistols; the countess accepted, and generously gave her adversary the first shot. Toe Marquis fired, and missed, breaking a branch from a tree. "Anger makes the hand shake," was the cool comment of the counters, Returning to male duelliste, we light on M. Returning to male ductions, we light on M. de Salute-Foix, a terribly quarrelsome gentleman, who retired from the army, and took to literature, without abandoning his warlike habits. Here is a specimen of his manner of the Cafe Procope, when one of the King's Guard entered and ordered a cup of coffee and a roll, adding in an undertone to himself: "That will do for my dinner." "You're making a miserable dinner," said Sainte Foix, addressing him. He repeated this several times, till at last the Guardsman got angry; a fight ensued, and Shinte-Foix was wounded. "It is all one," he said: 'a roil and a cup of coffee are a wretched dinner."

"You smell like a gost," was a polite observation he once made to a gentleman, who forth-with challenged him to fight. "To what pur-pose?" said Sainte-Foix. "If you kill me, you wont smell any better; and if I kill you, you'll smell a great deal worse. The history of the duel that Voltaire would have fought, well known as it is, is too interesting to be omitted. He was dining with the Duo de Sully, and in a discussion which arose, dif-fered in opinion from another of the guests. have killed! "And you my seventy-third! replied the Chevaller, whom the result proved to be in the right.

This humorous gentleman was in the habit of a servant told him that he was required below a servant told him that he was required below to be a servant told him that he wa delay, the great man descended, and made for hackney-couch, into which he was requested be a plaintive voice to enter. On doing so, he was On doing so, he was zed by one man, who held him while another administered five or eix blove with a switch. A la way off was the chevalier in his carriage, protected by four hired cat-throats. enough," he said, and gave the order to drive on. Voltaire returned to the bouse, and adjured the duke to regard as an insult to himself this ourrage on a guest. The host refused, however, even to make a deposition. From that moment Voltaire renounced for ever a house which he justly regarded as, by this neglect, covered with dishonor. In language, every word of which is more wounding than a sword-thrust, he next addressed himself to the authorities. "I most humbly represent that I have been brutally acsanited by the brave Chevalier de Rohan, aided so don't come by six cut throats, behind whom he was boildly long quartel. left my purse behind," cried Ludovic. "Do you go on; I shall come up with you by diener-time." Returning to Valerce, he went straight to the room of the officers. "Gentlemen," said he, "I am one of the two travellers with whom you refused to share your supper. You had a right to do this, but not to make your jakes upon us I don't like it, and I sak satisfaction of all of you." One after another, the four officers fall, and Ludovic reigning his brother.

System throats, behind whom he was boldly pushed. Ever since this time, I have sought to learly sought to do the authority of the Comte de Pontecoutiers, in this application, he took lee-box of the chevalier:

Some in fencing, and as soon as he could manage a young sublier, solely with the intention of provoking him to a duel. Finding, however, that Raioul was a mere boy, a fact disguised by his large stature, the fighting colonel made excuses, and wished to withdraw. Raioul refused to conficers fall, and Ludovic reigning his brother. officers fall, and Ludovic, rejoining his brother, rejoices that he has recovered his pure. Not a menda." The thrust was galling. This scion word of the duels, of which the brother hears of the house which for motto had, "King am not; prince deign not; Rohan I am," was be-lieved to do a smart business in petty, usurious loans. He accepted the challenge, and named invited the giver of the blow to accompany him to a quiet spot. The result of this promenade was, that the wearer of the taffets gave his adversary a wound had enough to lay him up for two menths. Before leaving the ground, he quietly drew from his pocket a pair of ecissors, quietly draw from his pocket a pair of scissors, and just out off from the piece of stuff a little circle. The wounded man was beginning to get about, when a visitor was announced by the servant. "It is a gentleman who wears a piece of taffets on his face; he says that you expect him." "Oh, sh; just tell him I'll come down." Another combat ends with the same fortune, and the reissors are again brought into play. These duels went on with the requisite intervals, till at last the taffets had decreased almost to a point. "I'm at the end of my piece," said the wearer C. to T., whose body was a mass of scars, "and you are at the end of your troubles." And so he was, for in the last duel, preluded by this little address, T. was killed.

The great Revolution so absorbed men's

The great Revolution so absorbed men's minds, that eccentric duels disappear for a while. Except that some are remarkable from the presence of political notabilities, there are few which would interest the reader. Combats tow which would interest the reader. Combats became more frequent under the Empire, though an officer who was frequently engaged in duels was certain to earn the profound contempt of Napoleon. From the mass of uninteresting duels, let us pick out one worthy of mention, if only from the fact that it came to an end in 1813, after a duration of nineteen years. Fournier, a captain of bussars, and a most inveterate duel-list, had, without provocation, called out and killed at Straeburg a young man named Blumm, the only support of a large family. Foursier's skill was so great that this affair was regarded as little better then a murder. On the even ing of Blumm's burial, General Moreau gave a ball, and as it was suspected that Fo would present himself, orders were given to Cap tain Depont to refuse him admittant consequence was that Dupont received a chal-lenge, which he gladly accepted, in the hope of at last chastising the inscience of a hardened cut-throat. Fournier fell wounded, "The first point to you," he exclaimed: "Then you mean to go on egain?" "Yes; and before long, I hope."

A month later, it was Dupont's turn to be wounded. Fournier proposed pistots; but Da-pont refused to accept a weapon which would give his adversary all the advantage. Fournier was so skillful with the pistol that frequently, as the men of his regiment passed on horseback at a gallop smoking, he would, with a bullet, knock the pipes out of their mouths. The two were so nearly equal with the sword that the contest seemed interminable; but they resolved to percevere till one or the other should admit himself to be beaten. To regulate their combats, the terms of an agreement were come to: "1. Whenever Dupont and Fournier shall be within thirty leagues of one another, each shall go half-way, in order that they may meet sword in hand. 2. If one of the two contracting parties should be prevented by his military duty, he who is free shall be bound to journey the whole distance, in order that the rules of the service and the requirements of the present treaty may be made to harmonize. 3. No excuses shall be accepted save those arising from military duties. 4. The present treaty being concluded in good faith, there can be no departure from conditions agreed on by the parties.'

The agreement was religiously adhered to, and the warmest friendship could not have created in the two cflicers a more eager desire to avail themselves of every opportunity to meet. "My dear friend," wrote one of these eccentric com-batants, "I shall be at Strasbourg on the 5th of November, about noon. Wait for me at the Hotel des Postes. We'll just have a touch at one another." Every now and then, the advancement of one or the other would interpose delay. This obstacle removed, Fournier (let us say) would write thus: "My dear Dupont, I delay. learn that the Emperor, recognizing your deserts, has just made you a general. Accept my sincere congratulations on a promotion which is only what you deserve. Your nomination is a double source of joy to me. On your account, I rejoice, and on my own also, for your promotion will give us the epportunity of an early meeting." At last they are both generals, but the combats so on. At one time, Dunont runs Fourright reyally his expected victory, but he reckonded mithout his host. The famous "blow of Jamac" broughthin, hamstrong, to the ground; and versary through the arm, the baron was ended and it is therefore rather hard on his meancy that the provethial expression which embaling his name should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of this combat, that on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the laid many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the substance of the sighteness of the sight many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the substance of the sight many should be applied to a stroke treacherous as well as fatal. Henry likes on the correct of the substance o weary of this endless contest; he was thinking of marrying, but must first settle with Fournier. Hunting him up, he proposed to finish up with pistols. To equalize the charces, it was decided pistole. hat the combat should come off in a little wood. Accordingly, on the appointed day, the last act opened. Advancing warily, the two at last caught a glimpse of one another. Each imme-Dupont, indiately took refuge behind a tree ferior in skill, had recourse to artifice. quietly lifted up his coat-tail, and pushed it beond the tree; a ball whizzed through it imme ciately. A few minutes later, the mouth of his pistol appeared on the other side of the tree, while, at the same time, just a corner of the hat projected, as if the wearer were peeping out to take aim. In a moment, a ball carried the hat away among the bushes. "Your life is in my hands," said Dupont; "but I won't take it." "As you like," said Fournier. "Only mind," continued the victor, "I reserve my right to put a couple of balls into your head whenever I like; so don't come near me." And thus ended this sent to this course, and swords were drawn. The disparity of the combatants was so great, that the colonel, after four times disabiling his adversary, proposed that some other mode of fighting should be found. It was impossible to loans. He accepted the challenge, and named his own place and time; then taking care to let his family know of the affair, they procure a lettre de cachet, and Voltaire is thrown into the Bastille, whence he emerges at the end of twelve days, only to go to Eogland in the custody of a warder. Clearly, nothing could provoke the chevalier; Voltaire abandoned his attempts.

Two officers of the Guards had a quarrel, which ended in a blow. The aggrieved person plastered on his cheek a piece of taffeta, the star of the paim of his hand, and then pointely made; and, at a signal, the cab started, two use pistols in the street; what was to be done! both! I'll get myself into the Chrenicles!" multiplied in the immense number of duels he fought, till his notched nose became quite a cone's exploits recounted in the deliciously naive language of Brantome. Witness his reflection on a fight, three sgainst three: "Some say that their lives for a simple inspection of the monstrous and disfigured cartilage. One of his exquick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, and then politely and the coach are due to Raoul: "we will go voke the chevalier; Voltairs abandoned his attempts.

Two officers of the Goards had a quarrel, which ended in a blow. The aggrieved person plastered on his cheek a piece of taffets, the proposed arrangements were quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, in truth, it was almost worth which to have to chevalier; Voltairs abandoned his attempts.

Two officers of the Goards had a quarrel, which ended in a blow. The aggrieved person plastered on his cheek a piece of taffets, the proposed arrangements were quick of hand, killed his rean the first, and went quick of hand, in truth, it was almost work the chevalier; Voltairs abandoned his attempts to look at too closely: a dczei men paid with the cheval into the coach, srmed each with a dagger, and the coach arms of the coach, srmed each with a dagger, and the coach arms of the coach arms of the coach, srmed each with a dagger, and the coach arms of the coach arms records on the box-seat, the other two behind, records on the box-seat, the other two beams. As the horses, driven by the seconds, dashed round at a pace unequalled in the history of hackney-coaches, one cry was heard, then a second, then all within was still. The journey second, then all within was still. The journey finished, the seconds rushed to the doors, and, from a pool of blood, draw out the two com-batants. Raoul was dead; the colonel, pierced with wounds, and with his face forn by Raoul's teeth, yet managed to survive.

Slight as were the means at their disposal, the officers taken prisoners by the English during the long war with France, contrived to sustain reputation of their country in the matter of duello. Here are two instances, which we on the authority of the Annual Register. give on the authority of the Annual Register.

A duel was fought by two of the French prisoners on board the Samson prison-ship lying in Gillingham Reach. Not having any swords, they attached to the ends of two sticks a pair of scissors each. The transaction took place below in the prison, unknown to the ship's company. One man, wounded in the abdomen, died." Again: "Two French officers on parole in Reading, fought a duel in a field not far from the New Inp. on the Oxford Road, when one of them New Inn, on the Oxford Road, when one of th New inh, on the Oxicra tool, when one of them received a ball, which passed through the back part of his neck. Unable to procure pistols, they had agreed to decide the affair with a fowling-piece, at about fifty paces, by firing alternately. The first discharge was conclusive. The officer who fired rendered every assistance to his wounded attacked. to his wounded antagonist. He accompanied him in a post-chairs to his loggings, where a surgeon dressed his wound, which is said not to

Annual Register also we give particulars of the following duel, of which, as we have found no mention of it in the French historice, we are inclined to think that it may pernape be no more the record of an actual encounter than the affair of Raoul X— (we have grave doubts as to the reality of personages designated by this initial in French ancodutes) and Dufai. The quarrel was between M. de Grandpre and M. le Pique, and the combat came off at, or perhaps we should say above. Paris, in May 1808. "Being both men of elevated minds, they agreed to fight in balloons, and in order to give time for their preparation, it was determined that the duel should take place on that day month. Accordingly, on the hape be no more the record of an actual place on that day month. Accordingly, on the 3d of May, the parties met at a field adjoining the Tulleries, where their respective balloons were ready to receive them. Each attended by a second, accended his car, loaded with blunderbusses, as pistols could not be expected to be efficient in their probable situations. A great multitude attended, hearing of the ballo little dreaming of their purpose; the Parisians merely looked for the novelty of a balloon-race. At nine o'clock the cords were cut, and the balloons ascended majestically amidst the shouts from the north-west, and they blowing kept, as far as could be judged, within about eighty yards of each other. When they had mounted to the height of about nine bundred mounted to the height of about nine bundred yards, M. le Piquesired his pices ineffectually; almost immediately afterwards, the fire was returned by M. Grandpre, and penetrated his adversary's balloon, the consequence of which was its rapid descent, and M. le Pique and his second were both dashed to pieces on a house-top, over which the balloon fell. The victorious Grandpre then mounted aloft in the grandest style, and descended asfe with his second, about seven descended safe with his second, about seven leagues from the spot of ascension."

It is hard to doubt, we confess, after the natural touch, "wind moderate, blowing from the north-north-weet." Surely the force of duelling can no further go; so here, in spite of the temptation offered by numerous anecdotes of more recent duels, we conclude our article.

Conversation.

Dr. Holmes thus depicts the characteristic etyles of conversation in the two leading cities of the Union, as they are represented at a boarding-school:

"Don't you think she's vurry good-lookin'?"
said a Boston girl to a New York girl. "I think she's real pooty."
"I dew indeed. I didn't think she was haaf so handsome the focest time I saw her," answered the New York girl." What a pity she hadn't been bawn in Baws-

"Yes, and moved very young to Ne Yock !"

And married a sarsaparilla man, and lived

"Indeed I shaan't What's the name of the alley, and which bell?" The New York girl took out a memorandum-book as if to put it

"Hadn't you better let me write it for you, ar?" said the Boston girl. "It is as well to have it legible you know. "Take it," said the New York girl. "There's tew York shill'ns in it when I hand it to You."

"Your whole quarter's allowance, I bul-lieve, -ain't it?" said the Boston girl.

"Elegant manners, correct deportment, and propriety of language will be strictly attended to in this institution. The most correct standards of pronunciation will be inculcated by precept and example. It will be the special aim of the teachers to educate their pupils out of all provincialisms, so that they may be recognized as well-bred English scholars wherever the language is spoken in its purity."-Ex-tract from the Prospectus of Madam Delacoste's

THE YEARS.-They do not go from us, but we THE YEARS.—They do not go from us, but we go from them, stepping from the old into the new, and always leaving behind us some baggage no longer serviceable on the march. Some seep our childhood, some our youth, and all have some thing of ours which they will give up for neither bribe nor prayer—the opinions cast away, the hopes that have had successors, and the follies outgrown to be reviewed by me-mory, and called up for evidence some day.

"Bill, did you ever go to sea?" "I I did; last year, for instance, I went to see a red-headed girl, but I only called there once." "Why so?" "Because her brother had an unpleasant habit of throwing bonjacks and smoothing irons at people."

IN MEMORIAM.

CATHARINE MARIA SEDGEWICK.

The "Tale" at length is told, The ready hand is cold,

The heart that best with love is still. O lay her gently to her rest, With thousand grateful wishes blest, Who bore to all her kind good will.

Unto her quiet " Home" be now in peace bath come,
That she may with her kindred sleep. ne wide spread homes that she has cheered,

The many hearts to her endeared, Their tribute bring with them who weep. he led the sick to health She gave the "Poor Man" wealth,
The Poor, the Rich, alike her friends;
The blessed "Means" she taught and tried,
The path of life she sanctified
To pure and high and noble "Ends."

Though frail the wreath we lay On her calm brow to-day, The memory sweet of all she gave Our youthful days to guide and please, Our riper years of care to ease, Shall bloom unwithered o'er her grave.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST.

BY MISS THACKERAY,

AUTHOR OF "THE VILLAGE ON THE CLIFF."

When Mr. Barly came down to breakfast, the When Mr. Barly came down to breakfast, the morning after his return, he found another of those great, square, official-looking letters upon the table. There was a cheek in it for £100. "You will have to meet heavy expenses," the young man wrots. "I am not sorry to have an opportunity of proving to you that it was not the money which you have taken from me I grudged, but the manner in which you took it. The only reparation you can make me is by keeping the enclosed for your present necessaity."

In truth the family prospects were not very brilliant. Myrtle Cottage was resplendent with clean windows and well-scrubbed door-steps, but the furniture wanted repairing, the larder falling. Belie could not darn up the broken flap of the dining-room table, nor conjure legs of mutton out of bare bones, though she got up ever so early; sweeping would not mend the hole in the carpet, nor could she dust the milderstains off the walls, the cracks cut of the look anna was morose, helpless, and jealous of the younger girl's influence over her father. Fanny was delicate; one glesm of happiness, however, streaked her horizon; Emily Ogden talked over Mr. Griffiths's proposition, Belle's own good sense told her that it would be folly to throw away this good chance. Let Mrs. Griffiths be ever so trying and difficult to deal with, and her son a thousand times sterner and ruder than he had already shown bimself, she was determined to bear it all. Belinda knew her own powers, and felt as if she could codure anything, and that she should never forget the generosity and forbearance he had shown her poor father. Anna was delighted that her sister should go; she threw off the shawl in which she had mufiled herself up ever since their reverses, brightened up wonderfully, talked mys-teriously of Fanny's prospects as she helped both the girls to pack, made believe to shed a few tears as Belinda set of, and bustled back into the house with renewed importance. Be-linda looked back and waved her hand, but

Anna's back was already turned upon her.

Poor Belinda! For all her courage and cheer fulness her heart sank a little as they reached the great bronze gates in Castle Gardens. She would have been more unhappy still if she has would have been more unnappy still it see and not had to keep up her father's spirits. It was almost dinner-time, and Mrs. Griffiths's maid came down with a message. Her mistress was tired, and just going to bed, and would see her in the morning; Mr. Griffiths was dining in town; Miss Williamson would call upon Miss wine were handed round, all the entries and delicacies came over again. Belle tried to eat to keep her father in company. She even made little jokes, and whispered to him that they evidently meant to fatten her up. The poor old feilow cheered up by degrees; the good claret warmed his feeble pulse; the good fare comforted and strengthened him. "I wish Martha would make us ice puddings," aid Belle, helping him to a glittering mass of pale colored. ing him to a glittering mass of pale-colored cream, with nutmer and vanilla, and all sorts of delicious spices. He had just finished the last mouthful when the butler started and rushed out of the room, a door banged, a bell rang violently, a loud scraping was heard in the hall, and an echoing voice said, "Are they come? Are they in the dining-room?" And the crimsom curtain was lifted up, and the master of the house entered the room carrying a bag and a great-coat over his arm. As he passed the side-board the button of the coat caught in the fringe of a cloth which was spread upon it, and in a minute the cloth and all the glasses and plates which had been left there came to the ground with a wild crash, which would have made Belle laugh, if she had not been too nervous even to

Guy merely told the servants to pick it all up, and put down the things he was carrying and walked straight across the room to the two frightened people at the end of the table. Poor Poor and this was signed with a G. frightened people at the end of the table. Boy and fine was signed with old Barly "Love! That is not for me; but I wish I and giving his daughter an abrupt little nod, all had a slave," thought poor Belle, hanging her head over the book as it lay open in her lap, he could find to say was—

"I hope you came of your own free will, Miss Barly?" and as he spoke he gave a shy scowl eved her all over

Yes," Belle answered, blinking her soft eyes to him more clearly. "Taen I'm very much obliged to you," said alone.

ad an unpleasant habit of throwing boblacks and smoothing irons at people."

All was such an assumant of the servants came in with a telegram. Be that Belinda's beart failed her again when Griffiths, still in an agony of shyness, then turned to her father, and in his roughest voice said,—

"You leave early in the morning, but I hope telegram came from Guy. It was dated from dued."

Poor fellow ! he meant no harm and only intended this by way of conversation. Belie in her secret heart said to herself that he was a cruel brute; and poor (Juy, having made this im-pression, broken a dozen wine-glassee, and gone through untold struggles of shyness, now wished them both good-night.
"Good-night, Mr. Barly; good-night, Miss Belle," said he. Something in his voice caused

Belle to relent a little.
"Good night, Mr. Griffiths," said the girl, standing up, a slight, graceful figure, simple and nymph-like, amidst all this pomp of circum-stance. As Griffiths shuffled out of the room he stance. As Griffiths shuffed out of the room he saw her still; all high be saw her is his dreams. That bright, winsome young creature dressed in white, soft folds, with all the gorgeous gildings and draperies, and the lights burning, and the pictures and gold cups glismering round about her. They were his, and as many more of them as he closes, the inspirants costic sides in increase. ner. They were his, and as many more or them as he close; the inanimate, coestly, sickening pomps and possessions; but a pure spirit like that, to be a bright, living companion for him? Ah, no! that was not to be,—not for him, not for such as him. Gay, for the first time in his life, as he went down stairs next morning, stopped and looked at himself attentively in the great glass on the staircase. He saw a great loutish, round-backed fellow, with a shaggy head and brown glittering eyes, and little strong, white teeth like a dog's; he gave an uncount sudden caper of rage and regret at his own appearance. "To think that happiness and life itself and love eternal depend npon tailors and hair-oil," groaued poor Guy, as he went down to his room to write letters. glass on the staircase. He saw a great loutist

Mrs. Griffiths had not seen Belle the night be fore; she was always nervously averse to sceing strangers, but she had sent for me that evening, and as I was leaving she saked me to go down and speak to Miss Barly before I weat. Beinda was already in her room, but I ventured to knook at the door. She came to meet me with a bright puzzled face and all her pretty hair falling loos about her face. She had not a notion who I was, but begged me to come in. When I had explained things a little, she pulled out a chair for me to sit down.

"This house seems to me so mysterious and unlike anything clos I have ever known," said she, "that I'm vory grateful to any one who will tell me what I'm to do here. Please sit down a

I told her that she would have to write notes to add up bills, to read to Mrs. Griffiths, and to come to me whenever she wanted any help or comfort. "You were quite right to come," said I. "They are excellent people. Guy is the kindest, best fellow in the whole world, and I have long heard of you, Miss Barly, and I'm sure such a good daughter as you have been will be

Belle looked puzzied, grateful, a little proud and very charming. She told me afterwards that it had been a great comfort to her father to hear of my little visit to her, and that she had eeded in getting him away without any very Poor Belle! I wonder how many tears she shed that day after her father was gone? While she was waiting to be let in to Mrs. Griffiths she amused herself by wandering about the house, dropping a little tear here and there as she went along, and trying to think that is unused her to see so many yards of damask and stair carpeting, all exactly alike, so many acres of chintz of the ne pattern.

Mr. Griffiths desired me to say that this tower room was to be made ready for you to sit in, ma'am," said the respectful butler, meeting her and opening a door. "It has not been used her and opening a door. "It has not been used before." And he gave her the key, to which a label was affixed, with "Miss Bantr's Room" written upon it, in the housekeeper's scrawling handwriting.

Bulle gave a little shrick of admiration. It was a square room, with four windows, over looking the gardens, the distant park, and the broad, cheerful road which ran past the house An ivy screen had been trained over one of the windows, roses were clustering in garlands round the deep, sill casements. There was an Indian carpet, and pretty silk curtains, and comfortable chiniz chairs and sofas, upon which beautiful birds were flying and lilies wreathing. There was an old-fashioned looking piano, too, and a great book-case filled with books and music. "They certainly treat me in the most magnifiarly that evening.

Dinner had been laid as usual in the great sofa in the window which overlooked the roseturret. There was a little writing table, too, with paper and pens and inks of various colors, which especially pleased her. A glass cup of cut roses had been placed upon it, and two dear cut roses had been placed upon it, and two dear little green books, in one of which some one had left a paper-cutter.

The first was a book of fairy tales, from which I hope the good fairy editress will forgive me for stealing a sentence or two.

The other little green book was called the Golden Treasury; and when Belle took it up, it opened where the paper cutter had been left, at the seventh page, and some one had scored the Belle read it, and somehow, as sonnet there. she read, the tears in her eyes started afresh.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire !

it began. "To ____" had been scrawled unneath; and then the letter following the To" erased. Belle blinked her eyes over it, but could make nothing out. A little further og she found another scoring,-

"Oh, my love's like a red, red rese That's newly sprung in June! h, my love's like the melody That's sweetly played in tone !"

and that he was clever enough to tell me what my father is doing at this minute." She could imagine it for hereel!, alas! without any magic interference. She could see the dreary little cottage, her poor old father wearily returning She nearly broke down at the thought, This was such an astonishingly civil answer we shall keep your daughter for a very long his office. "Your father desires me to send word that he is safe home. He sends his love. I have been to D. on business, and travelled down with him."

Belinda could not help saying to herself that Mr. Grilliths was very kind to have thought of His kindness gave her courage to meet his mother.

whatever it was she accomplished well and thoroughly, as was her way. Whatever the girl put her hand to she put her whole heart to at the same time. Her energy, sweetness and good epirits cheered the sick woman and did her infinite good. Mrs. Griffiths took a great fancy to her, and liked to have her about her. Belle lunched with her the first day. She had better dise down below, Mrs. Griffiths said; and when dinner time came the girl dressed herself. dinner time came the girl dressed herself, smoothed her yellow curls, and went shyly down the great staircase into the dining-room. It must be confessed that she glanced a little curiously at the table, wondering whether she was to dine alone or in company. This problem was soon solved; a side-door burst open, and Guy made his appearance, looking shy and ashamed of it as he came up and shook hands with her.

"Miss Belinda," said he, "will you allow me to dine with you?"

You must do as you like," sald Belinda.

quickly starting back.

"Not at all," said Mr. Griffiths. "It is entirely as you shall decide. If you don't like my company, you need only say so. I shall not be offended. Well, shall we dine together?" "Oh, certainly," laughed Be'iada, confused in her turn.

So the two eat down to dine together. For the first time in his life Guy thought the great room light enough and bright and comfortable. The gold and silver plate didn't seem to crush nor the draperies to sufficient, nor the was Beliuda picking her grapes and playing with the sugar-plams. He could hardly believe it possible. His poor old heart gave great wistful thumps (if auch a thing is possible) at the sound of her voice. She had lost much of her shyness, and they were talking of anything that came into their heads. She had been telling him about Myrtle Cottage, and the spiders there him about mythe Country, and the surprised to and looking up, laughing, she was surprised to see him staring at her very sadly and kindly. He turned away abruptly, and began to help himself to all sorts of things out of the silver

"It is very good of you," Gay said, looking away, "to come and brighten this dismai house, and to stay with a poor suffering woman and a great uncouth follow like myself." But you are both so very kind," said Belinds, iply. "I shall never forget..."

simply. "I cried Guy, very roughly. "I behaved like a brute to you and your father, yes-terday. I am not used to ladies' society. I am tupid and sby and awkward."

"If you were very stupid," said Belle, smil-Stupid people always think themselves tharming."
When Guy said good-night immediately after dinner, as usual, he sighed again, and looked at her with such kind and melancholy eyes, that Belle feit an odd affection and compassion for

"I never should have thought it possible to like him so much," thought the girl, as she slowly went along the pussage to Mra. Griffitha's

It was an odd life this young creature led in the great ellent, stiffing house, with uncouth Guy for her playfellow, the sick woman's com-plaints and fancies for her duty in life. The silence of it all, its very comfor, and splendid-ness, oppressed Belinda more at times than a simpler and more busy life. But the garden was an endiess pleasure and refreshment, and she used to stroll about, skim over the terraces and walks, smell the roses, feed the birds and the goldfishes. Bometimes I have stood at my win-dow, watching the active figure fitting by in and out under the trellis, fifteen times round the pond. thirty-two times along the terrace walk. Balle was obliged to set herself tasks, or she would have got tired sometimes of wandering about by herself. All this time she never thought of Guy except as a curious sort of companion; any thought of sentiment had never once commend passing impression. The butter put the dessert on the table and left them, and when she had As she was leaving the room she heard Gue's footsteps following. She stopped short. He came up to her. He looked very pale, and said suddenly, in a quick, husky voi face. She could hardly believe she had heard he had basked in the summer she had brought, aright. She was startled, taken aback, but she and found new life in the sun-hine of her pro-not knowing what to do or to whom to speak.

It was a comfort to be summoned as usual to read to Mrs. Griffiths. She longed to pour out ther story to the poor lady, but she dreaded sgitted for the control of the cont her story to the poor lady, but she dreaded sgi-tating her. She read as che was bid. Once she supped short, but her mistress impatiently motioned her to go on. She obeyed, stumpling and tumbling over the words before her, until there came a knock at the door, and, contrary to his custom, Gay entered the room. He looked very pale, poor fellow, and sad and sub-dued.

" I wanted to ree you, Miss Belinds," he said "I wanted to ree you, Miss Belinda," Dw main aloud, "and to tell you that I hope this will make no difference, and that you will remain with us as if nothing had happened. You warned me, mamma, but I could not help myself. It's my own fault. Good-night. That is all I had to say."

Belle turned wistfully to Mrs. Griffiths. The thin hand was impatiently twisting the coverlet.

"Of course,—who would have anything to say to him? Foolish fellow?" she muttered, in her indistinct way. "Go on, Miss Barly."

"Oh, but tell me first, ought I to remain ere?" Belle asked, imploringly.

here?" Belle asked, imploringly.

"Certainly, unless you are unhappy with us," the sick woman answered, peevishly.

Mrs. Griffiths never made any other allusion to what had happened. I think the truth was that she did not care very much for anything outside the doors of her sick room. Perhaps she thought her son had been over-hasty, and that in time Belinda might change her mind. To people lying on their last sick beds, the terrors, anxieties, longings of life seem very curious and strange. They seem to forget that they were, once anxious, hopeful, eager themselves, as they lie gazing at the awful veil which will so soon be withdrawn from before their fading eyes.

A sort of constraint came between Guy and A sort of constraint came between tray and Belinda at first, but it wore away by degrees. He often alluded to his proposal, but in so hopeless and gentle a way that she could not be angry; still she was disquieted and unhappy. She felt that it was a false and awkward posi-She feit that it was a false and awkward posi-tion. She could not hear to see him looking ill and sad, as he did at times, with great black rings under his dark eyes. It was worse still when she saw him brighten up with happiness at some chance word she let fall now and then— speaking inadvertently of home, as he did, or of the roses next year. He must not mietake her. She could not hear to pain him by hard words, and yet sometimes she felt it was her duty to speak them. One day she met him in the street, on her way back to the house. The roll of the passing exclusive wheels gave flow roll of the passing carriage wheels gave Guy confidence, and, walking by her side, he began

"Now I never know what delightful surprise may not be waiting for me at every street cor-ner. Ab, Miss Belle, my whole life might be one long dream of wonder and happiness, if—"

"Don't speak like this ever again; I shall go away," said Belle, interrupting, and crossing the road, in her agitation, under the very noses of two consibus horses. "I wish I could like you enough to marry you. I shall always love you enough to marry you. I shall always love you enough to be your friend; please don't talk of anything else."

Belle said this in a bright, brisk, imploring, decided way, and hoped to have put an end to the matter. That day she came to me and told her little story. There were almost as many reasons for her staying as for her leaving, the poor child thought. I could not advise her to go, for the assistance that she was able to send go, for the assistance that she was able to send home was very valuable. Guy laughed, and utterly refused to accept a sixpence of her salary. Mrs. Griffiths evidently wanted her; Guy, poor fellow, would have given all he had to keep her, as we all knew too well.

Circumstance orders events commitmes, when

Circumstance orders events sometimes, when people themselves, with all their powers and knowledge of good and of evil, are but passive instruments in the hands of fats. News came that Mr. Barly was ill, and little Belinda, with an enxious face, and a note in her trembling hand, came into Mrs. Griffithe's room one day to say she must go to him directly.

"Your father is ill," wrote Anna. "Circumstances domand your immediate return to

Guy happened to be present, and, when Beile left the room, he followed her out into the passage.

"You are going!" he said. "I don't know what Anna means by circum-stances—but papa is ill, and wants me," said Belinda, almost crying.

"And I want you," said Guy; "but that don't matter, of course. Go; go, since you

After all, perhaps it was well she was going, thought Belle, so she went to pack up bexes. Poor Guy's sad face haunted her. boxes. Poor Guy's sad fage haunted her. She seemed to sarry it away in her box with her

It would be difficult to describe what he felt, poor fellow, when he came upon the luggage "And married a sarsaparilla man, and lived in Fiff Avenoo, and moved in the fust so-ciety."

Dinner had been laid as usual in the great garden, and inhaling a delicious breath of fraciety."

Better do that than be strong-moinded, and flowers. Three servants were in waiting, a great silver chandlier lighted the dismal meal, kitch'n."

Belle, who was a little curious, it must be confessed, looked at everything, made secret, kitch'n."

Belle, who was a little curious, it must be confessed, looked at everything, made secret, kitch'n."

Belle, who was a little curious, it must be confessed, looked at everything, made secret, kitch'n."

Belle had been in the garden that Belle had taken him at his word. He was garden, and inhaling a delicious breath of fractions. Three servants were in waiting, a great silver chandlier lighted the dismal meal, huge dish-covers were upheaved, decanters of huge dish-covers were in waiting, and flowers. Three servants were in wa One day that Belle had been in the garden that Belle had taken him at his word. He way, with some roses in her apron, she suddenly almost ran up against Guy, who had come home earlier than usual. The girl stood blushing and looking more charming than ever. The young fellow stood quite still, too, looking with such expressive and admiring glanosa that Beilinda blushed deeper still, and made haste to escape to her room. Presently the gong sounded, and there was no help for it, and she had to go down again. Guy was in the dining room as polits and as shy as usual, and Belinda gradually forget the passing impression. The butter put the dessert color, or possible comfort anywhere, rose before htm. He tried to imagine what his life would be if she never came back into it; but as he stood still, trying to re ze the picture, it seemed to him that it was a thing not to be imagined or thought of. Wherever he locked he saw her, every where and in everything. He had imagined "Belle, will you marry me?"

Poor Belinda opened her gray eyes full in his the last few weeks, since little Belinda had come, followed her impulse of the moment, and an esence. Of an evening he had come home essered gravely— When he left early in the morning, he would He wasn't argry or su prised. He had look up with kind opes at her windows as he known it all along, poor fellow, and expected drove away. Once, early one mercing, he had nothing class. He only righted, looked at her once again, and then went away out of the shadow of the great aspen-tree, and making Poor Belle! she stood there where he had back the clean suff folds of her pink musing left her; the lights bound, the great table gits dress; she looked up with that peculiar blok of tered, the curtains waved. It was like a strange her gray eyes, amiled and nodded her bright dream. She elseped her bands together, and head, and shrunk away from the horses. Every then suddenly ran and flid away up to her own proming Gay used to look under the tree after room—frightened, utterly puzzled, bewildered, that to see if she were there by chance, even if meet him.

"I was looking for you, Mr. Griffi bs," said Belle. "Year mother wants to speak to you.
I, too, wanted to ask you something," the girl west on, blushing. "She is kird enough to with year to generate to eyes were fixed upon her steadily.

"Don't be afraid that I shall trouble you," he said, reddening. "If you knew—if you had the smallest conception what your presence is to me, you would come back. I think you would."

Miss Barly didn't answer, but blushed up again and walked on in stience, hanging her head to concest the two bright tears which had come into her eyes. She was corry, so very sorry. But what could she do? Guy had walked on to the end of the rose garden, and Belle had followed. Now, instead of turning towards the house, he had come out into the bright looking kitchen garden, with is red brick walls hung with various draperies of lichen and nd garlands of clambering fruit Four ittle paths led up to the turf-carpet which had been laid down in the centre of the garden. Here a fountain plashed with a tranquil fall of waters upon water; all sorts of sweet kitchenherbs, mist and thyme and paraley, were grow-ing along the straight out beds. Birds were pecking at the ness along the walls; one little arrow that had been dripking at the fountain flew away on they approached. The few bright-colored straggling flowers cought the smallght t in sparks like the water.

The master of this pleasant place put out his great, clumey hard end took hold of Belle's soft, reluciant flugers.

"Ah. Belle," he said, "is there no hope for me? Wil there never be any chance?"

"I wish with all my heart there was a chance," said poor Belle, pulling away her hand impatiently. "Why do you wound and pain me by speaking again and again of what is far best Dear Mr. Gaffithe, I will marry you to morro e, if you desire i," said the girl, with a sudden impules, turning pale and remembering all that she owed to his forbestance and gentle ness; "but please, please don't ask it." She looked so frightened and desperate that poor felt that this was worse than anything, and sadly shook his head.

Dan't be afraid," he said. "I don't want to marry you against your will, or keep you here. Yes, you shall go home, and I will stop here alone, and cut my throat if I find I cannot bear the place without you. I am only joking. I dare may I shall do very well," said Goffiths. with a sigh; and he turned away and began stamping off is his clumsy way. Then he suddenly stopped and looked back.

Then he suddenly stopped and housed ocal. Bell's was standing in the aunehine with her face hidden in her hands. She was so puxifed, and sorry, and hopeless, and mournful. The only thing she could do was to ory, poor child,—and by some instinct Griffithe guessed that she was some instinct Grimths guesses the with pive ing; he knew it,—his heart melted with pive ing; he knew it,—his heart melted with pive crying; he knew it,—his heart meited with pity.
The puor fellow came back trembling. "My dearest," he said, "don't cry. What a brute I am to make you cry! Tail me anything in the whole world I can do to make you happy." I could only do anything for you," said

Belle, " that would make me happier. Then come back, my dear," said Guy, " and don't fly away yet forever, as you threatened just now. Come back and cheer up my mother, and make tea and a little sunshine for me, until

-until some confounded fellow comes and car-ries you off," said poor Griffishs.

'Oh, that will never be. Yes, I'll come," said Belle, earnestly. "I'll go home for a week and come back; indeed I will!" "Only let me know," said Mr. Griffithe, "and

Nothing would induce G/ fliths to order the carriage until after dinner, and it was quite late at right when Belle gos home.

Poor little Myrtle Cattage looked very small and shabby an she drove up in the darkness to the door. A brilliant Illumination extramed from all the windows. Martha rubbed her elbows at the eight of the gorgeous equipage. Fanny came to the door surprised, laughing, g geling, mysterious. Heavything looked much usual, except that a large and pompous-king gentleman was sitting on the drawingrosm cofe, and beside him Auna, with a huge on her fourth finger, attempting to blush as is come into the room. Bille was that she was not wanted, and ran upstairs to her father, whe was better, and sitting in the arm chair by

Papa clings to me and wants me, now that both who was better, and sitting in the arm chair by his bedeide. The poor old man nearly cried with delight and surprise, held out both his shaking hands to her, and cloug tenderly to the bright young daughter. Belle sat beside him, holding his hand, saking him a hundred questions, kiesing his withheld face and cheeks, and teiling him all that had happened. Mr. Barly, too, had news to give. The fat gentleman downctairs, he told Belie, was no other than Anna's old admirer, the doctor, of whom mention has teen made. He had re-proposed the day before, and was now sitting on the so's on probation.
Fanny's prospects, too, seemed satisfactory.
"She assures me," said Mr. Barly, "that young Ogden is on the point of coming forward. old man like me, my dear, is naturally anxious This was what Guy had feared all along the the man like me, my dear, is naturally absidue the was gone, he knew by instinct she would provide for, I don't know who would be good never come back. I handly know how it fared enough for my Belinda. Not that awkward lous with the poor fellow all this time. He kept out No, no; we must look out better of our way, and would try the night before when Belle arrived at the con-tage, gave a loud shrick when she went into the should not rejent to so much goodness and un-room next morning and found some one asleep selfishness, and come back again some day, e awoke, laughed and ex-

miss, that's more than me and Martha have the

"Hampers, "what hampers?" Belle seked; but when she went down she found the fittle passage piled with cases, flowers, and game and who had been peking about and exemining the various punkages, looked up with offended

I, too, wanted to ask you something," the girl went on, blushing "She is kied enough to wish me to come back . . But—"

Belie stopped abort, blushed up, and began pulling at the leaves eprouting on either side of the narrow alley. When she looked up after a minute, with one of her quick, short-sighted glances, she found that Guy's two little brown eyes were fixed upon her steadily.

"I have been directed to me, instead of to you, Belinda. Mr. G. fliths strangely forgets. Indeed, I fear that you too are wanting in any great sense of ladyike propriety."

"Prunes, prism, propriety," and Beile, gavly to see were fixed upon her steadily.

me to drink two dozen bottles of port wine in a

"You are evading the question," said Anna "I have been wishing to talk to you for some time past,—come late the dising room, if you

I cannot help fearing that out of sheer spite and enry Anna Barly had even then determined that if she could prevent it, Belind a should never if one could prevent it, Belind a should never go back to Castie Gardene again, but remain in the ottage. The eight of the presty things which had been given her there, all the evidences which told of the esteem and love in which she was held, maddened the foolish woman. I can give no other reason for the way in which she opposed Belinda's return to Mrs. Griffiths. "Her "I myself shall futy is at home," said Anna. be greatly opgoged with Thomas,"-so she had already learns to call Dr. Robinson. "Fanny also is preoccupied; Belinda must remain."

When Belie demurred and said that for the Brat few weeks she would like to return as she had promised, and stay until Mrs. Griffiths was satised with another companion, Anna's indigna-tion rose and overpowered her dignity. Was it her sister who was so oblivious of the laws of society, propriety, modesty? Anna feared that Belinds had not reflected upon the strange appearance her conduct must have to others, to the Ogdens, to them all. What was the secret attraction which took her back? Anna said she had rather not inquire, and went on with her oration. 'Unmaidenly, -not to be thought of, the advice of those whose experience might be trusted"—does one not know the rigmarole by heart? When even the father, who had been previously talked to, elded with his eldest daugh ter, when Thomas, who was also called into the family conclave, nodded his head in an ominous manner, poor little Belinds, frightened, shaken, undecided, almost promised that the would do as they desired; and as she promised, the thought of poor Guy's grief and wistful, haggard face came before her, and her poor little heart sched and sank at the thought. even Belinds, with all her courage, could resist the decision of so much experience, or Anna' hints and incendose, or, more insura countable sciousness which had come over the poor little maiden, who turned crimson with shame and an-DOTALCE

Belinds had decided as she was told-had done as her conscience bid her - and yet there was but little satisfaction in this duty accom-plished. For about half an hour she went about feeling like a heroine, and then without any res son or occasion, it seemed to her that the mass had come off her face, that she had discovere herself to be a traitoress, that she had betrave and abandoned her kindest friends; she called herself a seifish, ungrateful wretch, she wondered what Guy would think of her; she was out of temper, out of spirits, out of patience with herself, and the click of the blind swinging in the draft was unendurable. The emplacer expression of Auna's bandsoms face put be teeth on edge. When Fanny tumbled over th footstool with a playful shrick, to everybody's Surprise Belinds burst out crying.

Those few days were endless, slow, dull, un bearable—every second brought its pung of regres and discomfort and remorse. It seemed to Belinda that her ears listened, her mouth talked "Only let me know," said mr. triming.

my mother will send the earriage for you. Shall me say a week?" he added, asxious to drive a

at the furzs on the common, at the faces of he

at the furzs on the common, at the faces of he atters, with a cort of mechanical effort. As in atters, with a cort of mechanical effort. As in atters, with a cort of mechanical effort. turally and without effort. Oaly when she was with her father did she feel unconstrained; bu even then there was an unexpressed repreach in her heart like a doll pain that she could not quiet. And so the long days lagged. Although Dr. Robinson culivened them with his presence, and the Ogdens drove up to carry Fanny off to the happy regions of Capulet Square (E. for Evelum Anna I think would have docksted the district,) to Belinda those days seemed slow, and dark, and dim, and almost hopeless at times.

On the day on which Balinda was to have returned, there came a letter to me telling per story plainly enough.

"I must not come back, my dearest Miss Wil liamson," she wrote. "I am going to write to my elaters are going to leave him. How often I shall think of you all -of all your goodness to me, of the beautiful roses, and my me, of the beautiful roses, and my deat little room! Do you think Mr. Guy would let me take one or two books as a remembrance—Hume's History of England! Porteous's Sermons, and Es-says on Reform! I should like to have something to remind the of you all, and to look at sometimes, since they say I am not to resyon all again. Good by, and thank you and Mrs. H.

a thousand thousand times.

"Your ever, ever effectionate Helispa.

"P. S. Might I also sak for that lutte green. volume of the Galler Transey which is the tower room?"

of a Guillidia. No, no; we must look out better that that."

"O papa, if you knew how good and how kind he is!" said Beile, with a sudden revulsion of feeling; but she broke off abruptly, and spoke and I had talked it over—for old women are f something else.

The other maid, who had already gone to bed play a sensimental part in life as well as young never to go any more. We knew enough of plained, and saked her to bring up her things.

"Bring 'em hup?" said the girl. "What, all nor did we despair of veeing Balunda among them 'ampere that's come by the eart? No.

once more. But some one must help her; Anna Barly to auess the part she had played, nor did we despair of seeing Balinda among us nore than me and Martha have the could not reach us unassisted; and so I told Mrs.

I should crick my back if I were Griffiths, who had remarked upon her son's distrees and altered looks.

"If you will lend us the carriage," I said,
"either H. or I will go over to Dambleton tomorrow, and I doubt not that we shall bring preserves, and some fine old port for Mr. Barly, her." tains, and some roses for Balle. As Belinda came H. went. She told me about it afterwards, miles.

self, who was coming down the garden-walk to down stairs, in her fresh morning dross, Anna, Anna was fortunately absent. Mr. Barly was down-stairs, and H, was able to talk little bit before Relinds come down. old man always thought as he was told to think, and since his ilineas he was more uncertain and broken than ever. He was dismayed when H. told him in her decided way that he was pro-bably sacrificing two people's happiness for life by his ill-timed interference. When at last Beinde came down, she looked almost as ill as hundred questions. "How were they all what were they all doing ?"

was very decided. Everybody was very il and wanted Belinds back.

"Your father says he can spare you very cil," said she. "Why not come back with me this afternoou-if only for a time? your duty," H. continued, in her dry way tainty.

"Go, my child; pray go," urged Mr. Barly. And at last Belinds consented shyly, nothing

H. began so question her when she had got her safe in the carriage. Briinds said she had not been well. She could not sleep, she said. She had had bad dreams. She blushed and confeesed that she had dreamed or Gny lying dead in the kitchen-garden. She had gone abo tried-to be cheerful and busy as usual, but she felt unhappy, "Oh, what a foolish girl I am ! uugrateful.

All the lights were burning in the little town the west was glowing and reflected in the river the boats trembled and shot through the shin vaters, and the people were out upon the banks as they crossed the bridge again on their way from Dumbleton. Beile was happier, certainly but crying from agitation.

Have I made him miserable, poor fellow I think I shall blame myself all my life, said she, covering her face with her hands

H. dryly replied that she must be guided b circumstances, and, when they reached Caetle Gardens, kissed her and set her down at the great gate, while she herself went home in the

It was all twilight by this time among the roses. Belinda met the gate keeper, who touched his hat and told her his master was in the gar den; and so, instead of going into the house she flitted away towards the garden, crossed the lawns, and went in and out among the bowers and trellises looking for him-frightened by he own temerity at first, gaining courage by de grees. It was so still, so sweet, so dark; the stars were coming out in the evening sky, a meteor went flashing from east to west, a bat flew across her path; all the scent hung heavy in the air. Twice Belinda called out timidly, "Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Griffiths!" but no one acswered. Then she remembered her dream in sudden terror, and hurried into the kitcher garden to the fountain where they had parted.

What had happened? Some one was lying on the grass. Was this her dream? was it Guy? was he dead? had she hilled him? Belinda ran up to him, seized his hand, and called him Guy —dear Guy; and Guy, who had fallen asleep from very weariness and sadness of heart opened his eyes to hear himself called by the voice he loved best in the world; while the sweetest eves, fall of tender tears, were gazing anxiously into his ugly face. Ugly! Fairy have told us this at least, that ugliness and du ness do not exist for those who truly love. Had ehe ever thought him rough, uncouth, unlov able? Ah! she had been blind in those days she knew better row. As they walked bac through the twilight garden that night, Guy sald bumbly-"I shan't do you any credit, Beiinda; I can only love you.

She aidn's finish her sentence; but he under #### stood very well what she meant. THE ESD.

The durability of painted wood has been shown by a report recently made by the Provi-dence Railroad Company. Recently the super-intendent of that company took up several white when placed in the ground more than thirty years ago. They were covered with paint, which had probably preserved them.

Small mirrors, it is announced, are placed outside the windows of the private houses is Brussels and other German cities, by means of which the lady inmates are able to see, wisho ooking out, those passing by in the etree below, the figures being reflected in the glass. A visitor is seen by the same mesns when he appears at the door, and "at home" or "not at home" is often thus determined upon.

Fire John Porter has appealed to th President for a new trial, and claims that he has fresh festimeny to prove that he was unjustly condemned by the court-martial of 1863. Horse Sovernor Cartin recommend that his request

Wendell Phillips has expressed his belief that impeachment will follow immediately on the reassembling of Congress. But that will depend probably upon how the elections go this

THE HOMELESS CLASSES IN LONDON -- O se public dormitories, the largest and best is the mail of St. Jamee's Park. There are c benches that have backs or a tree closbehind them are at a premium. On an average each seat has three occupants. Some prefer to recline at full length, others rest with outstretch ed legs, pocketes hands, heads well down, but toned up costs, and ham half way over their noises. Lads combine in a heap, and toward dewn rice to shake their wits together and enj a stimulating stretch. Not only from the lowest class are the guests recruited. Many of the conjecture may busy itself as to the cause of their open air elumber .- London Periodica

Paris despatches appounce that Gariaim will leave London immediately for the loman horder. On his arrival there lively times may be expicted.

Hon Oakes Ames, M. C., of North East ton, Mussiconsetts, in conjunction with a western gentleman of equally ample means, has Union Pacific Railroad for the sum of It is an immense underabout $47 000 000 taking, as the route lise across the Rocky Moun-tains, and the distance is about six hundred

Witch-Pins.

Samuel Cols, the founder of the magnificent arms manufactory at Hartford, Conn., London, etc., and known all over the world, happened to be visiting that somewhat famous museum at alem Mass.,— a vast omnium gatherum of all the ancient relies of Puritanism—when, among ther curiosities, he was shown a large lot of crooked brass pins, dingy and green and verdigris, which had been vomited up by Griffiths himself. She rushed into H.'s arms the poor votings of persecution, when the desti-with a scream of delight, and eagerly saked a had been cast out of them by the good and holy exorcises of that period.

Col. Colt examined the pine with great interest and close secutiny. At length he said to

"Is it certain that these pins were really thrown up by these poor women devile at that ramole time? "You'll find the date in the estalogue which

"You'll find the date in the case by reply, on have in your hand," was the only reply.

'Yes, I see—I see," responded the colonel, that I've been looking into those pies a little. and I find that the long part and the head of the pin are all in one piece! That makes it bad, you see, because that kind of pin was invented about a century and a half after the witches of New England were executed for being 'possessed with the devil!' Take the idea, sir? These pine ought to have been old English pine, the eads and bodies separate; and I do how you are going to get 'em now, for our pine have run that kind out of the market years and

Those " crooked pine" have vanished from the

A writer beautifully remarks that man's mother is the representative of his Maker. Misfortune and mere crime set no barriers be-tween her and her son. While his mother lives s man has one friend on earth who will not de sert him when he is needy. Her affection flows from a pure fountain, and ceases only at the

One Hugh McElroy, a Montana miner lately shot himself. The coroner's jury called in the case brought in a verdict "that the depeased committed suicide, and that he did so is

The Republican majority for Governo in the Maine election is variously estimated, the highest figure being 13,500-a loss of 14,000 since last year. The Democrats will have seven out of the thirty-one State Senators, and they claim a majority of the Representatives. total vote of the state is about 11 000 less than

The Common Council of New Orleans has chosen for Assistant Recorders, three ne chosen for several other municipal positions.

The New York Commission habit, as worn itowing description of a riding habit, as worn worse horsewomen: "It is a Zonave The New York Commercial gives the by some Western horsewomen: rig, which allows the lady to sit astride her steed. A close-fitting basque, tastefully orna mented with embroidery, with Zonave pants made full like those of the Turks, and gathered at the bottom into bands which are concealed in the tops of high tight-laced gaiter boots. On a straw turban, with a plain velvet band and a tuft of flowers. Lilac is a favorite color, with black trimmings." The Commercia recommends the adoption of this habit, for reasons of health and eafety.

There must be considerable freedom of manners out West. A Chicago bachelor, who lives in a boarding-house, wants to know "how bow kiesing and hugging at the tables, by recently married people," may be prevented.

The authenticity of the recently disforeshadowing the theory of gravitation, is de-

A Buddhist "praying machine" is one ne cariosities of the exposition. It consists of a little equare box, with a handle at the right When you wish to say a prayer, a turn of the handle will do it as easily as if it were a tune on a barrel organ. The Buddhist machine has this advantage over a Barbary organ, that it is noiseless. Its inventors guarantee it to eay a hundred and twenty prayers a day, and it will never get out of order. The prayers are written on rollers in the box.

Raws.—"Pray, sir," said a young Singaisees, learning English, to his tutor, "am I raw when my clothes are off?" "Not unless you have subbed your skin off. Tell me, why do you ask?" The young man opened the dictionary and pointed to "Raw; undressed."

Silkworms, fried in castor oil, are cond a luxury in China.

A wedding was postponed by a severe storm in Missouri recently. An immense cranberry crop in New Jer-

Dr. Henry C. Shaw, in an article in the loston Medical and Surgical Journal, on reign Bodice in the Ear," says that in his experience he has taken from the ear beans, cotton, slate pencils, peas, maggots, cockroaches, beads, glass, crockery, shells, of combs, stones, and seeds.

The Columbus, Mies., Sintinel details the editor to a cotton plantation, the work on which was entirely performed by laborers. The number of acres cleared all laborers about 1900, of which 600 were planted with cotabout 1900, of which 600 were planted with 1900 were planted wi There were twenty-one men and seven or eight youngeters who worked on an average about twenty scree each. It was one of the bes arranged and managed plantations in the cotton region. The crop promise was excellent, and estimated at 1,200 pounds to the acre.

Official returns of the registration inta show a white majority of over 13 000 According to official data, about 8 000 ordens have been granted by the President since April 15, 1865 Ca A machine, propelled by horse power like a reaper, has been invented in lows to gather and crush the potato bugs.

The Chicago cattle yards have 150 scree floored with plank. There are pens for 75,000 entile, 20,000 sheep, and 20,000 hoge.

The editor of the Amberet, N. H. Farmere' Cabinet has an apple tree upon which are now growing several bushels of Porter apples, several winter squashes, and a printer's butter beans!

Louiss Mulbach is a widow and has a family

The Montana Post, of August 24, says that Dr. James Dunleys, while exploring the head waters of the Yellowstone, discovered a salt water lake, covering about forty acres. The water is always at the boiling temperature : meat thrown in was boiled in less than forty minutes. The water contains a large per centage of the crude material from which borax is manufac-

Tasting a Jewel.

The most precious stones have a property that rarely deceives, that of coldness. An experiment can easily be made by tasting first a piece of straw and then a dismond. A Parisian correspondent tells the following story of testing by tasting:

A few years since a young Parisian jeweler was ecjourning in Wallachia. He had in his possession several expensive gems, and, among others, an emerald of unusual size. The Jewish merchants, who, on the banks of the Danube, as well as throughout Europe, deal in precious tones, waited upon him to examine his wares. stones, waited upon him to examine his wares. The emerald was greatly admired; but one of the jewelers, a cunning old tradesman, (who, aware of what he himself was capable of, had very little confidence in others,) while handling very little condence in others,) while handling it, expressed the belief that it might be the work of the hands of man. Wishing to test the genuineness of the article be placed it in his mouth, when the young jeweler seized him by the throat and threatened to throttle him if he attempted to swallow it. The Jews of Walla-chis wear no cravats, and the Frenchman was holding the unfortunate connoisseur with an iron grip. The incredulous purchaser soon restored he emerald to its owner, and then explained to him the process to which he wished to submit it. The explanation quieted the Parisian lapidary at once, and thenceforward he determ to taste all precious stones the appearance of which was doubtful.

A Healthy Prayer.

Commend us to the Mayor of Galesburg, Illinois, for hitting the bull's eye in the way of a proclamation for fasting and prayer. Mayor West goes straight at it, when, after designating the day, he says:—"I do therefore recommend to the good people of Galesburg that on that day they lay aside all secular employment, and assemble in their respective places of outlier. ascemble in their respective places of public worship, and there devoutly pray God to par-don our past sins, and keep us in future from sinning against Him, and from violating the laws, either physical, moral, or municipal. And while we pray that He will protect us from the ravages of disease, pray also that He will in-disease us to abste every nuisance, cleanse every yard, remove every nuisance, cleanse every yard, remove every species of filth, and every oause that is likely to produce sickness, believing that God is willing to help those who manifest a disposition to help themselves."

A healthy prayer that, with a solid chunk of

A MATRIMONIAL INCIDENT .- At the South Pewabio mines, Lake Superior, a man and his wife had a severe quarrel, resulting in his packing his bundle and starting off for Ontonagon, declaring that he would live with her no longer. She followed him along the road, begging him to return; but he was inexorable, and trudged on. Finally she became so exasperated that she vowed that if he did not turn about she would strip herself stark naked, and in that condition follow him to his journey's end. As he did not stop, she was as good as her word, and leaving her clothing by the roadeide, she followed him in that cool, fascinating costume of nature. This only made him laugh. When they came to the intersection of the road they met a party of young men who had been out fishing, and then young men who had been out fishing, and then the husband began to think that the wife's costume was not exactly the kind prescribed by etiquette, and taking a stout switch, he started the new Godiva back on a keen run, not allowing her to stop and gather up her clothes. She made splendid time in going from the clearing to the house. Since then both parties have indefinitely postponed their trip to Untonagon.

DOUBTRUL -Tennyson says he has been more annoyed by Americans intruding upon his privacy than by any other people. His own counand delicacy, and call upon him at an hour when it might be convenient to him; "but your American may pounce upon you at any moment, without any 'introduction,' and when you are the least prepared to receive his- Wny, Mr. Tennyson, how do you do?" This is not the only unkind out Americans have received lately from writers on the other side; but we are not Dickens, it will be remembered, only just now made a statement about "the labor of his life for the past thirty years," which is received with a little doubt in some quarters.

It is stated, as a matter of undoubted story, that President Washington pardoned the Ponneylvania whiskey rebels by a general amesty, without any Congressional authorization, and previous to any trial or sentence.

An exchange says a farm devoted to grass and apples will bring the most money. Rightly managed, these crops are like grace and faith, growing better through the whole of one's

WORSE FOR CORRECTION .- An editor, in complimentary notice of a valiant general, was made, by the omission of a single letter, to sall him a " hattle scared" veteran. The poor man metened to make amends in his next tesue by eaving he meant "battle scarred," but the compositor put it "bottle scarred."

It is said that any politician from the Eastern states who makes a trip to the Pacific and praises the country on his return, is immediately nominated for the Presidency by the newspapers of that section.

Germany has given birth to a new relious sect, the members of which worship in si nce and in darkened rooms. EPITAPS.—In the Gothic church at Dob-orman (a village of Mecklenburg, Germany) is to be seen the following epitaph (translated) Here lies Ableke Pott! pity on me, O, Lord God! As I would have pity on Thee,

And I Lord God -Some one has been describing the latest veity in ladice' costume, and assures us that t is the introduction of silk and stuff which show great affection to the wearers—that is, cling to them. In the time of the French Revolution, however, the ladies much more practically solved this difficulty-namely, by damping the material in parts where they wished it to cling and show a beautiful Phidias like outline.

Great desire has been shown lately in France to read the Bible, which, it is alleged, is due in a large measure to the feeling produced by the works of Renan. Many have been in duced, after a reading of these works chase the New Testament, in order to works, to purfor themselves whether the account given b him of the life of Christ is true. The number of copies sold in France during the year was 66 878

OUR DOG.

BY PRENTICE.

It is necessary to own a dog. Why, it is dif-

It is necessary to own a dog. Why, it is difficult to tell, but everybody, at some time in his life, has taken unto himself a doz.

Our dog Nip made himself at home immediately after his arrival at the house. There were no intermediate stages of backwardness with him in his intercourse with the family, or in his assuming the direction of a large portion of affairs relating to the household. He is a small dog, but very lively. His natural condition seems that of motion. He concentrates within himself the activity of three or four ordinary dogs.

nary dogs.
His first act, soon after coming to live with His first act, soon after coming to live with us, was to take charge of the back-door mat. He seemed to regard it as his own exclusive possession. He had his ideas with regard to its place and use. We preferred that it should remain where the cleanliness of the household might be best promoted. He preferred it in the back-yard. It stayed in the back-yard. The whole household toiled in vain to keep it where it was supposed to belong, dragging it time whole household toiled in vain to keep it where it was supposed to belong, dragging it time after time up the back-stairs, all to no purpose. When such a dog as Nip chooses to devote his whole life to keeping a door-mat in the back-yard, it is difficult to contend successfully with him. When he thought we had become resigned to his disposition of the mat, he became dissatisfied because we were resigned. He wished to do something provoking. He loves actions of this kind. There was an inoffensive old broom which, having been discarded from the house, was used to sweep the back-stairs. This he set upon and tore also to pieces. The broom never did him any harm. It would not harm anybody. But its total innocence and inoffensiveness provoked him. Good-nature is often provoking.

ness provoked him. Good nature is often provoking.

He has access to the cellar. He rules there. It was a very quiet and orderly cellar previous to his coming. If it be so now, it is according to canine, not human, views of order and neatness. He was furnished with a heap of old clothes for a bed. These have been torn up and dragged in every direction. He has no use for a bed. His time is too precious to be devoted to sleep. There are holes to be dug in the bare cellar floor, and anything accidentally hung up within his reach must be torn down. The kindling-woed must be scattered about. Old newspapers falling in his reach must be torn to shreds. In his eyes the general appearance of the premises is much improved by these bits of torn newspaper. He monepolizes the morning paper left at the door, and it is often found lying ignobly in one corner of the yard covered with gnobly in one corner of the yard covered with dirt, "gone to the dogs." He shows a great contempt for newspapers.

contempt for newspapers.

Nip is a great pet. That is what he was given us for; something on which we might expend our spare care and sympathy. Nip more than "fills the bill." He is always performing some aggravating and mischievous action, so that we have fearth him. never forget him-never.

He mines. The back-yard is fitted with numerous excavations and heaps of dirt. He buries bones in one place, and then digs large holes elsewhere, pretending to be looking for them. This is the only shadow of excuse made for any mischief committed. As for eating, he bolts a meal in ten seconds. Yet it is a satisfaction to see that this aggravating little brute faction to see that this aggravating little brute cannot thus outrage nature with impunity, as evinced by his occasional bodily contortions consequent upon an overloaded carine stomach.

We have a rooster. Before Nip's arrival he was a haughty and consequential rooster in his own estimation, and that of his several wives. He issued his pronunciamentos daily, claiming the allegiance of his hens, and boasted in long speeches concerning the completeness of his speeches concerning the completeness of his authority over the yard and hencoop. But Nip has taken all the conceit out of him. Daily he chases him in abject fear before his subjects. He has chased him from the high podestal of his former dignity. Adding injury to insult, he has torn out the most glorious of his tail-feathers. It is pitiful to see a rooster so completely de molished both in appearance and dignity. He rups after the hens also. Not from motives of gallantry does he this, but to humiliate more thoroughly the dejected, tail-ridden rooster. Our persecuted fowls have scarcely a place in which they may lay their heads—or their eggs,

He has contests with an old tin pan, carried on with great noise and fury. He idealizes so successfully that the combat is more real than imaginary. The contest goes on over the whole yard, the combatants swaying backward and forward, but Nip always comes off victorious. We could dispense with his dragging this utenal up the steps and letting it roll down again. It his estimation the dramatic effect may be very powerful, but the peace of the family is not at all increased by the clangor. It must be very gratifying to fight an opponent so terrible, to be almost overcome, and yet to be ever certain of victory.

The most provoking characteristic of this animal is, that punishment, when inflicted, has no effect on him. He is often turned out of doors in diagrace, but he igneree this as punishment entirely. He refuses to be regarded with disapprobation. His manner speaks thus to us as he noisily scratches at the door for re-admittance, or looks impudently in, his paws resting on the sill of a low window :- "Oh, you needn look so cross. You like all these prants of mine after all. You couldn't get along without me. I am the Punch of the household. D.dn't I make a nice mess of the contents of your work-basket? I can do so sgain if you will only let me in."

He has occasionally been whipped, but seems to feel no shame on account of the castigation, and, the operation over, always resumes his usual frisky manner. He has an admirable command of temper and bears no malice. This disposition heaps coals of fire upon the heads of those whom he causes to lose their tempere. To one's conscience it says—"There, you've lost your temper, haven't you? and you a hu-man being but little lower than the angels, and I nothing but a dog, and a little dog at that. Feel any better for that kick you gave me? It shall not make any difference in our relations. I am still your affectionate Nip, as full of mis-chief as ever. Loss of temper causes remorse, both for our weakness in losing it, and for mean acts committed while laboring under such stupid, ugly antagonism, causing him to seek revenge in snarling, biting, or a fit of sulks more or less prolonged, there might be some degree good-humor and inevitable foreiveness is very ggravating. He comes off victorious in these soul conflicts, and covers us with shame to be besten by a dog.

Nip, after all, is a positive benefit. Although he at times annoys, yet he amuses and instructs.

Dog nature is worth studying, as well as human nature. And in the comparison between the two, the latter has cometimes cause to blush.

A brigand leader in Italy has threatened a towe, that unless the cholera is immediately stopped, he will come and stop it blueself by burning and destroying everything. This might be fairly called "heroic treatment." The more ignorant classes in Italy have the most absurd ideas relative to the cholers-it being the con-ecquence of poison, &c.

The niot to-day comes to me from a baby's mouth, and is at least worthy of Punch. Baby is lost; the whole family is in despair. At last he is found at the end of the garden, standing by a tall sunflower, grave, motionless, patient. His feet are buried in the sand, and his eyes are turned towards the sunflower. "Why, what are you doing, baby?" "I have planted myself to grow."

planted myself to grow."

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says:—"A young man has just committed suicide at a hotel near the Rue St Martin, by sticking about fifty pins in his breast. When found he was bleeding to death, and expired shortly after. He left a letter saying that his life had been one series of disappointments and suffacions and that as fetallity was killing him.

life had been one series of disappointments and sufferings, and that as fatality was killing him a coups depingle, he had chosen that way of putting an end to his existence, which manner, he believed, he had been the first to imagine."

It is easy, in the world, to live after the world's opinion: it is easy in solitude to live after our own. But the great man is he, who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of his character.

In large assemblies of men there is more feeling and less thought than in small ones.

THE MARKETS.

THE MARKETS.

PLOUR—The market has been more active. Sales 8000 bbls at from $7 to c, 25for superfine, $8 o9.50 for old stock and fresh ground verts; $100 12,75 for old stock and fresh ground Penna and Ohto 12,75 for old stock and fresh ground Penna and Ohto family; $10011,75 for low grade and fancy Northwest family, and $13014 $7 bbl for fancy brands. Rye Flour is selling at $9,356-85,75 $7 bbl.

GRAIN—Prime Wheat is scarce. About 14,000 bus fair to good new red rold at $2,000 39; 10,000 bus prime do at $2,350-240; seme lots of choice amber at $2,450-2,05 5000 bus white at from $2,500-2,75 $7 bus according to quality, and 3000 bus fair to good one of $2,500 bus white at from $2,500-1,53 $7 bus. Corn; $9,500 bus Western mixed rold at from $1,500-1,53 $7 bus. Corn; $9,500 bus. Oats, $9,000 bus fair to good sold at from $5,005 c, and $25,000 bus. PROVISIONS—There is very little doing. For commands $25,000.50 for mess; $22,024 for prime do, and $22 for prime. Mess Beef—City packed sells at $27,500-25. Bacon—Sales of ham at 19-20c; circen bleas—Sales of pickled hams at 17-215c, and shoulders at 144-145c. Green bleas—Sales of pickled hams at 17-215c, and shoulders it 144-15c. Eggs at 150-15yc. Butter—Sales of middlings sold at 26-205yc for Uplands, and 27-27yc $7 be for New Orleans.

BARK—Sales ist No. 1 Quercitron at $45 $7$ ton. BEES WAX—Sales of velow at $410-200 be ton.

Orleans.

BARK—Sales 1st No. 1 Quercitron at $45 \ to BERSWAX—Sales of yellow at $1642c \ b. COAL—The market continues very dult. The nominal cargo rates are $464.25 \ to to fee with ask; $6.3664.75 for red ask; $4.364.15 for Lecumbountain, and $5.25 for Lehigh broken and prepared.

pared,
FEATHERS—Western sell at 700-85c.
FRUIT-Dried Apples are selling at 6.00c. Dried Peaches—Sales of quarters at 90-90c, and haives at Pealbyc * b, and Dried Blackberries at 8.000c.

HOPS—Small sales at from 50.070c. PLASTER—The last sale of soft was at $3.50 $ ton.
SEEPS—Small sales of Cloverseed are reported at $2,750.1.
Fixxseed is selling at $2,75 $\oldsymbol{\psi}$ bus.
TAILLOW—Small sales are reported at 11\(\chi_0\) or (ity rendered, and 11\(\chi_0\) of the for country.

country
WOOL.—The market continues duil. Small sale are making at 55.55°c for double extra; 52.55°c for extra; 52.55°c for ine; 43.57°c for medium; 35.54°c for coarse, 43.55°c for the washed, 46.55°c for extra Weatern pulled, and 32.53°c * 5 for No. 1 Western pulled, according to quality.

PHILADELPHIA CATTLE MARKETS. The supply of Beef Cattle during the past weel amounted to about 2000 head. The prices realize from 15-06 cts w h. 200 Cown brought from 5-16-16 to 7 w head. Sheep—5-000 head were disposed at from 4-5-5 c w ho. 35-00 Hogs sold at from 81 min,75 w ho has

Forty thou sand are now in use BUFFALO, N.Y. CHICAGO, ILL

628. HOOP SKIRTS 628.

Of "Our Own Make" are manufactured express to meet the wants of First Class and most Fashio able Trade, and embrace an assortment replete with every new and desirable style, size, and length of every new an deciration styre, size, and length of Ladies!, Miases! and Children's Hoop Skirts, both plata and Gore Traits, which for symmetry of style, finish, lightness, clasticity, durability and cleap-ness, are much superior to any other single or Double Spring Skirt in the American market Every lady should try them, as we warrant satisfac-on.

Wholesale and Retail at Manufactory and Saleskom, No. 628 ARCH St
Catalogue corrected monthly of Sizes, Styles, and Catalogue corrected any address
Prices at Retail sent to any address
WM. T. HOPKINS.

New Glee Book Just Published.

THE GREETING: A collection of Gieer. Choruses and Part-Songs By L. O. Emerson. Author of "The Juddate." Hap of Judah." "Gold Wreath." "Merry Chimes. "Ac. The places contained in this book are nearly all new A largumer have been contributed by Mr. L. H. South and, and the whole will befund to passess unusurations for societies, clubs and amateur singer attractions for societies, clubs and amateur singer attractions for societies, clubs and amateur. Price, 81 3c. 812 per dozen. Mailed post-prid.

OLIVER DITSUN & Co., Fundamera.

Betton.

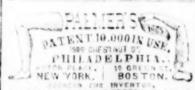

CHARLES H. DITSON & C

A WORD TO BOTH SEXES.

SHGULD ANY LADY WISH TO IMPROVE HER CONFILEXION remove freques or moth patches, or any other diagonations of the skin save should envigentisman desire to reproduce lost tail upon the head, or increase the growth of whiskers or mountaches, or change the host to a more destrable color they may address Mme I of ARFHUR, 74 Bleecker St. New York, and be sure of receiving such information by return until surpass their most sanguine expectations.

Rates of Advertising.

Thirty cents a line for the first insertion Twen y cents for each additional inscriton II Payment is required in advance

These in rentions stand approved as the "best" by the most eminent scientific and Surgical Societies of the world, the inventor baving been honored with the award of FiFTY GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS (cf. "First Prince"), including the GREAT MEDALS (cf. the WORLD'S EXHIBITIONS IN LONDON AND NEW YORK; also most Honorary Report of the great SOCIETY OF SUNGEONS OF FARIS, giving his Patents place above the ENGLISH and PRENCH.

DR. PALMER gives personal attention to the business of his profession, sided by men of the best qualifications and greatest experience. He is specially commissioned by the GOVERNMENT, and has the patronage of the promisent OFFICERS of the ARMY and NAVY SIX MAJOR-GENERALS and more than a thousand less distinguished efficers and soldiers have soon the PALMER LIMBE and civilians are, by when side, fill important positions, and effectually conceal their misfortance.

All graving "PALMER LIMBS" Area than the province of the p

All genuine "PALMER LIMBS" have the Pamphiats, which contain the New Rules for Amphiations, and full information for persons in want of limbs, sent free to applicants, by mail or

The attention of Surgeons, Physicians, and all per-ions interested, is most respectfully solicited.

The well-known LINCOLN ARM is also made steley by this Company. This Arm has the pa-ronage of the U.S. GOVERNMENT.

To avoid the imposition of PIRATICAL COPY (STS, apply only to Da. PALMER, as abow directed.

3 MONTHS FOR 0.

Look at What we Offer.

American Agriculturist,

Three Months for Nothing.

All baw subscribers to the American Agriculturist for 1868, received in September, 1867, with the money, shall receive that paper for October, November and December, 1867, FREE.

40 pages, well printed, and filled with plain, practical, reliable original matter, including hundreds of beautiful and eastructive Engravings in every It contains each month a Calendar of Speration to be performed on the Farm, in the Orchard and Garden, in and around the Dwelling, etc. Circulation-Terms .- The circulation of the American Agriculturist (about 180,000) is so large that it can be furnished at the low price of $1.00 a year ; four copies, for $5 ; ten copies, for $12 ; twen ty or more, $1 each ; single numbers, 15 cents each

THE BEST FAMILY PAPER.

THE BEST CHILDREN'S PAPER, THE BEST HORTICULTURAL PAPER. THE BEST AGRICULTURAL PAPER.

Make all remittances cither by checks or deafts York City, payable to the order of Orange Judd & Ca , or by Post Office Money-orders, or in

ORANGE JUDD & CO., 41 Park Row, New York.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

By A REPUBLICAN (not a " Madical").

This is a 12mo, containing 116 pages, and is devoted to a caim and moderate discussion of the Sufrage, question—the author contending that the Sufrage, should be Qualified, and not Unqualified and Universal. Negro Sufrage, and also against Fennie Suffrage, and also against Fennie Suffrage. The work will be forwarded by mall (postage prepaid), on the receipt of the price, 50 cents, by the publishers, J. I. LIPPINCOTT & CO.

1/13-tf No. 715 Market St., Philadelphis.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.

YOUNG AND OLD MAKING MONEY.

The LOWE PRINTING PRESSES are the best and cheapest portable Card and Job Presses ever avented. Price of an Other with Press. $13, $20, $20. Send for a circular to the LOWE PRESS CO., jet5-6m, ADJES AND GENTLEMEN EMPLOYED Picture business Very profitable. No risk seventeen specimen Pictures and Catalogue sention is cents postage. MANSON 1-ANG. 2021 Reviews, New York City. 297 Bowery, New York City.

PENNINGTON INSTITUTE, 23d year began August 29th Terms reasonable For Cata-logues, address A. P. Lasillia, Fennington, N. J. aug 19-1m

ECLECTIC MEDICAL COLLEGE of PENN ENGLISH - WINTER SESSION com mence OLTOBER 7, 100° Folity students taker for $10 per session. No other expenses. For per dicuters address. JONEPH SITES, M. D. Den, 1927-142. 899 North Sith St. Philisdelphia

CURL YOUR HAIR — One application will curl your hair into beautiful curls and last six aponths in every case or money refunded. Seet by mail, partice pids, for he cents. Address M. A. JAGGERS, Calhoun, Iliz.

THE BOWEN MICROSCOPE,

Stamifying 506 times mailed for 50 CENTS THERE for $1.00 Address F F BOWEN. dec17-tf Box 230, Boston, Mass.

GREAT AMERICAN

Tea Company

TWO FULL CARGOES ..... FINEST NEW CROP TEAS,

22,000 HALP CHESTS by ship Golden State, 12,000 HALP CHESTS by ship George Shotton.

In addition to these args cargoes of Black and Japa the following prices:

OOLONG | Hlack |, 80c., 80c., 70c., 80c., 10c., best $

MIXED (Green and Black), 50c., 50c., 70c., 90c., 90c., MIN ED Gircon and Black, 500., 500., 700., 900., 900., bot 51 & B. ENGLISH BEAKFAST, 500., 600., 700., 800., 900., 81. 51. bott 51 & br 15. INFERIAL (Green), 500., 600., 700., 100., 900., $1. 51.0, bott 51 & B. YOUNG HYSON (Green), 500., 600., 700., 800., 900., $1. 91. bott 51 & br 15. UNCOLORED JAPAN, 800., $1. 91 10. bott 51 & br 15. UNCOLORED JAPAN, 800., $1. 91 10. bott 51 & br 15. GUNPOWDER, $1 25, best $1 50 4 B.

Coffees Roasted and Ground Daily.

GROUND COFFEE, 20., 25c., 30c., 35c., best 40c. per the Hotele, Nalcons, Boarding-house keepers, and Families who use large quantities of Coffee, can economize in that article by using our French breakfast and Branet Coffee, which we sell at the low price of 30c. per pound, and warrant to give perfect estishibition.

Consumers can save from 50c, to $1 per th, by purchasing their Teas of the

GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,

Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY STREET. Post office Box, 5643 New York City.

We warrant all the goods we sell to give entire satisfaction. If they are not satisfactory they can be returned at our expense within 30 days, and have the meney refunded.

Through our system of supplying Clube throughout the country, consumers in all parts of the United States can receive their Tean at the same prices (with the sunsit additional expense of transportation) as though they bought them at our warehouses in this city.

Some parties inquire of us how they shall proceed to get up a club. The answer is simply that: Let each person withing to join in a club, asy how much tea or coffee he wants, and select the kind and price from our Prices Let, as published in the paper or in our circulars. And when the control is independent on the paper of in our circulars, and when the control is independent on the paper of the control is not we will put each party is gooded as give and unrick the name upon them, with the cost of here need be no confusion in their distribution—each party getting exactly what he orders, and so more. The cost of transportation the members of the civil can divide equitably among theraselves.

The Funds to pay for the ficods ordered can be sent.

squitably among themselves.

The Funds to pay for the Goods ordered can be sen
by Brafts on New York, by Post Office Money Orders by Express, as may sout the convenience of the Club Fr, if the amountproferred exceed thirty dollars, we will f desired, send the Goods by Express, to "collect or rery for we will send a complimentary package to every for we will send a complimentary package to each setting up the Club. Our profits are small, but will be availabled as we can afford. We send no come centary package for Clubs of less than 3.36.

N. B.—All villages and towns where a large number reade, by clubbing together, can reduce the cost of their fears and Coffees about one third by sending directly to. The Great American Tea Company." BEWAILE of all concerns that advertise themselves as branches of our Establishment, or copy our manu-ettier wholly or in part, as they are bound institutions. We have no branches, and do not, in any case, autho-rize the use of our name. Past office orders and deafts make payable to the order

GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMP'Y, Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY ST.

Post office Box, 5643 New York City.

BELLS.

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS,
Chimes and Bells of all Sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.
Made of Pure Bell

RUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y

"ECONOMY IN WEALTH."-Franklin.

WHY will people pay $50 or $100 for a Sewing Machine, when $35 will buy a better one for all practical purposes? Notwithstanding reports to the contrary the subscribers beg to inform their numerous friends that the "Franctist" and "Missialities" and subscribers he had in any quantity. This machine is a double thread, constructed upon entirely new principles, and DOES NOT infringe upon any other in the world. It is emphatically the poor man's Sewing Machine, and is warranted to excell all others, as thousands of patrons will testify. If FAGENIS WANTED—Machines sent to Agents on trial, and given decay to families who are needly and deserving. Address J. C. OTTIS & CO., Boston, Mass.

PAVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE a complete set of Parson's Self-Institution Charts for cutting Ceats, Vesta and Pants for men and boys complete set consisting of 32 full-sized garments sent to any address on receipt of price, 82. Agents wanted, Erclusive territory given Send for circular.

BUBBELLA PARSONS, sep74t

GOLD: GOLD: My GOLDEN COMPOUND face thick and the sured to grow on the amountest face thick and heavy in every cise in 21 days of money refunded. Sent by mall posinge paid, for So cents a package, or 3 for $1. Address M. A. JAGGERS, Calborn, Itis.

R. DOLLARD, CHESTNUT ST.

Inventor of the colebrated GOMSAMER VENTA-LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOU-PACES Instructions to enable Ladies and Gentie-men to measure their own heads with accuracy.

WHEELER & WILSON'S

No. 625 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

These Machines are new sold, with valuable imrevenence, at the following schedule of prices:-

Ho. 3 Machine, with

No. 9 Machine, With

The number 3, piain table, (worth $55) of the above list, is the machine we are new offering as a Passium for The Laur's Paises and The Sares-

319 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

SUMMER TIME, TAKING EFFECT JUNE 2nd, 1867.

198 MUNDAYS—The Market Street cars leave Front and Market Streets 35 minutes before the departure of each train.

TRAINS LEAVE DEPOT, VIZ : MAIL TRAIN
PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 1 10 00
FANT LINE & ERIE EXPRESS 12 10 P M
PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 2 1 10
HARRISBURG ACCOMMODATION, $ 20
LANCASTER ACCOMMODATION, $ 40
FARKESBURG TRAIN 5 40
WESTERN ACCOM TRAIN 5 40
CINCINN *TI EXPRESS 7 20
ERIE *MAIL 7 50
PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS 11 15

Eric Mati leaves daily, except Saturday.
Philadelphia Express leaves daily All other trains daily, except Sunday.
THE WESTERN ACCOMMODATION TRAIN runs daily, except Sunday | ror full particulars as to fare and accommodations apply to FRANCIS FUNK, Agent, 137 Pock Street.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT BEFOR, VIZ TRAIN ARRIVAL AT BRIOT, VIZ.

OINCINNATI EXPRESS 7.10

BRIE MAIL
PARTICLA COMMODATION, No. 1.
PARRESBURG TRAIN 9.30

LANGASTER THAIN 9.30

PAST LINE AND ERIE EXPRESS 1.10

PAGLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 4

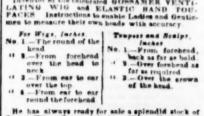

DAY EXPRESS 9.30

BARRISBURG ACCOM. 9.59

For further information, apply to

For further information, apply to JOHN C ALLEN, Theset Agent, 901 Chestnut St.
SAMUEL H. WALLACE, licket Agent, at the Depot.
The Penasyivanta Ratical Co. will not assume any risk for Baggage, except for Wearing Apparel, and limit their responsibility to the Handred Dollars to value. All Baggage exceeding that amount is value, will be at the risk of the owner, unless taken by special contract.

CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, SCROPLLA of PRINCE, Flushing, New York for so proprietor of the Linnsen Nurserica has discourproprietor of the Linnaen Norseria has discovered the remedial Plants which are positive cares for the above and all Chronic diseases, Dyspessis, Astima, Nervous Denilty Rheumatian, and all female maiatics, and others from impurity of the blood Explanatory Circular, one stamp. Treatise on all Diseases we cents.

He has always ready for sale a splendid stock of Gents' Wigs, Toupees, Ladies' Wigs, Haif Wigs, Frincis, Braids, Curis, &c., benuiffully manufac-tured, and as cheap as any establishment in the Union Letters from any part of the world will re-ceive attention Private rooms for Dyeing Ladica' and Gentlemen's non-cowiy

HIGHEST PREMIUM

SEWING MACHINES,

Philadelphia Agency, No. 704 Chestant St.

Plain Table, Half Case, Panelled, Oiled Wainut, Salf Case, Polished, Black Wainut or Mahegany, 55

Waxed Black Walnut Table,
Hair Case, Fanelled, Olled Walnut,
Hair Case, Polished, Black Walnut or Mahegany, 75
Hair Case, Polished, Rosewood,
Full Case, Polished, Black Walnut or Mahegany,
with Drawers,
Full Case, Polished, Black Walnut or Mahegany,
with Drawers,
Full Case, Polished, Rosewood,

No. 1 Machine, with

Polished Table, 878
Haif Case, Oilöd Walnut, 82
Haif Case, Polished, Black Walnuter Mahogany, 85
Haif Case, Polished, Rosewood, 98
Pull Case, Polished, Black Walnuter Mahogany, 106
Pull Case, Polished, Black Walnuter Mahogany, 110
Pull Case, Polished, Black Walnuter Mahogany, 110
Pull Case, Polished, Rosewood, 110

Every Machine is sold complete with a Hemmer. Nos. I and 2 Machines are sold with the new Giase Cloth-Presser, New-style Hemmer and Braider. No. 3 with the Old-style Hemmer.

higher priced machines may be procured by sending us the difference in Cash.

PENNSYLVANIA CENTBAL BAILROAD

The trains of the Pennsylvania Central R. R. leave the Depot, at 31st and Market Streets, which is reached directly by the cars of the Market Street Passenger Railway. Those of the Chestant and Wainut Street Railway run within one square of it.

Sleeping Car Tickets can be had on application at the Ticket Office, North-West corner of Ninth and Chestnut Streets.

AGENTS OF THE UNION TRANSPER COMPANY WILL call for and deliver baggage at the Depot. Orders left at No. 901 Chestnut Street, or No. 1 South Elevents Street, will receive attention.

PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS 11 15 PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 3 9 00

W HISKERS.—DR LAMONTS CORROLLS WIll on Bald Minds Never known to fall. Sample sent for 16 cents Address REEVES & CO. 78 Natesus St., New York.

Jy6-1y

NVALID YOUNG MEN. suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivite of quastery send your address to a convarience that you not a suffer young address to a convarience
that you not a suffer young address to a convarience that young men. Suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivity that young men. Suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivity that young men. Suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivity that young men. Suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivity that young address to a convarience
that young men. Suffering from dedistry, after having swong round the entirectivity
that young address to a convarience that young a young address to a convarience that young address to a con

WIT AND HUMOR.

RITTER HUGO.

Der noble Ritter Hugo Von Bahwilleneaufe Rode out mit shpeer and belmet, Und he coom to de panks of de Rhine.

Und oop dere rose a meer ma'd, Vot hadn't got nodings on, Und she say, "Oh, Ritter Hugo, Vere you goes mit yourself alone?"

And be says, " I rides in de creenwood, at and mit shpeer, Tili I coome into ein Geethaus, Und den outshpoke de maiden Vot hadn't got notings on : Dat goes mit demself alone.

Und dere I trinks some beer.

"You'd petter coom down in de wasser, Vere deres heaps of dings to see, I'm hafe a shpleadid tinner ad drafel along mis me.

Dere you seen de fisch a schwimmen, Und you eatches dem efery one : S) sang dis wasser maid:n V: t hadn't got nodings on.

" Dere is drunks all full mit money In ships dat vent down of old; Und you helpsh yourself, by donder! To shimmerin crowns of gold.

Shoost look at deee shooms and vatches! Shoost see dese diamant rings! Coom down and full your bockets,

Und I'll gies you like avery dings. "Vot you vanish mit your schnapps and lager Coom down into der Raine! Der ich pottles der Kalser Charlemagne Vonce filed mit gold red wine !" Har fetched him-he stood all shpell-bound; She proled his cost tails down, She drawed him conder der wasser, De maldene mit nodinge on.

Fighting Men.

One of the generals of the "Lou Cause" re-lates the following in the Commercial Bulletin There was a little Frenchman in New Orlean he applied to a Southern cilicial for a bert for his son, a short time ago. Thinking to carry favor with this party, who was "native and to favor with this party, who was "native and to the manor born," he said—

'My lect'e boy (aged 283) iz vere smart man, vere good man, good Southzarn man, and brave plus brave; yes, saie, he has grande courage."
"Indeed," said the cilidial, "I do not seem to recall your name in the army list. What actions was your son engaged in? Where did he diplay such walaysed.

he di play such undanuted courage?"

"All se t me ut Generale Bullare was here he stay right still in New Orleans, under his now a

It is pechaps unnecessary to say that the offi cial could not appreciate the monits of the "Child of France," and moneicur retired, sadly disap-

Another Illustration of this kind occurred in the person of the mate of a Mississippi boat, that we had converted into a cotton clad for the attick on Fort Pillow. This fellow was a big, burly, double-fisted sample of a river bully "full of etrange oathe," and always enforcing his orders by knowing men about the head Just before we went into the fight he came swaggering up to me and said-

Waal, gineral, I suppose when one side or t'other's licked, you big men'il quit an' shake

'Yee, Jom," said I; ' when the fighting is over I expect every man to go home and attend to his business."

"That ain't me," said Jim, smiting his left palm with a fist like a sledge hammer, "fur ef ever I betch a Yank agin south of Cairo, I'm

A ten luch shell that came whistling over the boat interrupted any further remark just then, and shortly after we were butting away at the Federal bosts, and in about as hot a fire as I ever want to see. I should think there was a hundred guns opened on us, and we got one broadelde so near that the fisch of their gune well, but the other side were too strong for us, and we had to drop down the river. During the action, while cannon were roaring, boats sinking, shells shricking and bursting all around, and the air filled with flame and smoke, I quite lost eight of Jim, but after we had dropped down the river, out of fire, and all hands were busy repairing damages, that valiant hero crept out from behind a cotton bale, and eneaking past me with a face like a flag of truce, said— "Gineral, I sin't so mad as I was. This ain't the kind of fightin' I'm used to, an' when then fallers get ready to stop throwin' them from pots round, I'll quit if they will." And sure enough, in two weeks, he went into the Federal Connect - A good story is told of Profes Adams of Amherst. He was very dry and witty, it is said, and the following is too good to pass by: A student was called upon to describe the peculiar characteristics of the shark. He was a fluent speaker, and answered at some length.

"Incorrect," said the professor.
Uawiking to acknowledge his ignorance, the student tried again.

ell, to tell the truth, professor, I-I don't kno . anything about it."

WARKING TO BOYS - A Sabbath school teacher "Boys, you ought to be very kind to your little sisters. struck his sister a blow over the eye. Although the didn't slowly fade away and die in the early summer time, when the June-roses were blow id lips, she rose up and his him over the pallid lips, she rose up and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to Sonday-school for more than a month, on ac-count of not being able to put on his best hat?"

When Lord Sidmonth one day said, "My brains are gone to the dogs this morning," his friend at once ejaculated, "Poor dogs!"

It often happens, when the husband its to be home to dinner, that it is one of his

MERMAIDS' TOILETS IN '67.

BLANCHE.—"I say, some of you, call after aunty! She has taken my chignon, and left me her horrid black one!"

Valuable Land.

A recent paragraph touching paper cities, reminds a Watertown correspondent of the mania for speculation that raged throughout the country in 1886, and ran particularly high in Oswego Mr. De Z. resided there and owned considerable real estate, which he caused to be surveyed into city lots and mapped. A superb lithograph was got up, showing a great number of streets, ave-nues, etc. This he took into Wall street for ex-hibition and to make sale of his lots. Several gentlemen were examining it one day, when one of them inquired-

"Mr. De Z, what kind of buildings are on this property?"

"Buildings I" rejoined the exhibitor. "Buildings! why, gentlemen, the hand covered by this map is altogether too valuable to be built on P obliged to sell a yoke of oxen to pay his hired man, told him that he could not keep him any

"Why," said the man, "I'll stay and take some of your caws in place of money."

"But what shall I do," said the old farmer, when my cows and oxen are all gene?"

Why, you can work for me and get them

People who have been laying up money for a rainy day ought this season to be found among the most liberal of customers.

The young lady who gave herself away her self-possessio

If a man's wife is well bred, he never wants any but her.

ACRICULTURAL.

American Grain at the Paris Exposition After the gratifying accounts of honor which American mowers and harvesters reaped at the great World's Fair at Paris, we are somewhat taken down by the result of our show of cervels.

We are in the habit of thinking of the western part of the United States as the granary of the world, and of young Chicago, as standing high among the grain marts of the world. We also not we got one understood from our Western papers that measures had been taken for a creditable display of the productions of the fertile soil in our grain growing states of the Mississippi valley. are, therefore, a little disappointed by the award of premiums in the grain department of the Paris Exposition, and by the following remarks of the intelligent correspondent of the Prairie Farmer upon this part of the exhibition.

In the amount of specimens in this depart-ment, which embraces "cereals and other estables, farinaceous products, with their deriva tives," we were as well represented as other na-tions, though our arrangement for showing then was inferior. Yet this writer says, dian corn and a few samples of wheat out of a great number, especially those from California, excluded we should have but little left to shoe the fertility of our soil, or the adaptability of our climate to the production of animal food, or the skill of our farmers as evinced in the silling

"Lest some may consider me as doing in ustice to our country," continues this writer, let them look at the award of premiums upo collections of cereals, just made. They the gold medals distributed as follows: They will find three; Prussia, fire; France, four; Portugal, two; Spain, che; English Colonies, (Australia) one; Duchy of Mecklenburg, one;—none going to the United States. Of the silver medals, one as Yollows: Great Britain, one: France, one: Beigium, three; Austria, seven; Spain, three Italy, four; Chill, one; Egypt, one; English Colonies, (Canada) two. Among the bronne medals we figure to the extent of six, while France carries off seventeen; Grecor, one; Sweden, two; Italy, seven; Eggish colonies, twenty-four; Belgium, five; Prussia, ten; Tur-key, two; Portugal, six; Russia, nine; Sweden, ene; Morocco, one; Brazil, one.

"Among the Honorable Mentions we find two awarded to the states, while the remainder are distributed in about the same proportion as the eilver medals, among other countries.

"With the exception of Duryea's preparation of corn, called Maixens, and well known in the states as an article for puddings, &c.,—very nearly the same thing as corn starch, but superior-I think all the higher awards for the Indian corn is, I find, grown more or iees in almost all parts of the world. In few places, however, do the larger varieties approach the products of the Western states. In Australia we have the most successful competitor. In-The valley of the Rhine also contributes quite creditable displays. But for the entire conti-nent, where it grows at all, they must depend upon the smaller varieties of flint corn.

"The people here are gradually being educated up to acknowledge the fact that maize may be really a palatable and healthful article for diet. Each year will witness an increase in the demand of our corn for human food, as well as food for beasts. Where grown, it now forms a large share of the food of the peasantry.

"In regard to other cereals it is difficult to state from whence come the best specimen The case of English Pedigree wheat is very fine the heads being of gigantic size, but it hardly excels, in many respects, that from California while it must be admitted that Southern Illinois and Michigan send most excellent samples. The Surprise Oats of Illinois find competition The Surprise Oats of Illinois find competition, successful perhaps, is the New Market Oats, weighing fifty pounds to the bushel, and in the samples from Sweden. The most uniform grain on exhibition is barley. Almost every country presents it, and it is uniformly good. In the French and German departments we find most beautiful samples of beans, in great variety. Much more attention is paid to the cultivation of this crop here than in the states. Of course beans form an important article of diet all over Europe, but one nowhere meets with the "baked Europe, but one nowhere meets with the "baked beans" of New England. A large, white, kidney bean, called Haricot, is to be had at all times at French restaurants, especially in those of secon rate character.
"From all I can learn, I should judge that rye is every year becoming a less important crop, both in Great Britain and on the continent. The samples I have noticed are in no wise remarkable, either at the exhibition or growing in the fields. It is very certain that the specimens from our own country are not of un-exceptionable character. Much of it is but very indifferently cleaned."

We take the following sensible article from the Lower Canada Agriculturist :-The recent improvements in Ame tecture have not reached the stables to the ex tent that could be desired. Brown stone fronte high ceilings, marble mantelpieces, costly fur-naces for warming and ventilating the dwellings may please the eye, and promote the health an comfort of the occupants, while the valuable poorly constructed and poorly ventilated stable The fault often lies in two directions. The stable may be too tight, or too open. A horse needs light as well as air, and suitable warmth and food—the vegetable structor hardly needs light more than he does. Pure air is essential. His blood cannot become purified while the air which inflates his lungs is full of foul gases from fermenting manures. Nor is it enough to keep the stalls clean, if they are so tight that the horse is obliged to they are so tight that the horse is obliged to breathe his own breath over and over. Digestion is interfered with and all the functions in life are impeded. Lazy grooms declare that a close warm stable, helps to make a horse's coat fine and glossy in winter as well as in summer. But in winter such a coat is not to be desired. ture provides the animal with longer hair and more of it to defend him from the cold. If the horse is well groomed and blanketed, his hair will be smooth and glossy enough all the year round. The indolent groom ought himself to be shut up for twenty four hours in the hos steaming air in which he would confine his master's horse, and see how he would like it. Open the doors of such a stable in the morning, where several horses are kept, and the hot air and the hartshorn are almost sufficient to knock a man down. What wonder then that horses so used should suffer from inflamed eyes, coughs, glanders, and other ailments! The wonder is, that they bear the abuse so long and so well.

New, the "improvement" to our sermon is simply this: Ventilate the stables. Ventilate in winter and eummer. The outer air should be brought in at certain places near the floor, but not in the immediate neighborhood of the horse, so as to cause hurtful drafts of wind Impure air must be ejected, as well as pure air brought in. This can be done in summer very well by leaving several windows open in different parts of the barn. But a better way is to insert ventilators in the highest part of the building, into which ventihighest part of the building, into which venti-lators (square wooden tubes) shall lead from the stalls, and which can be opened or closed at pleasure. These ventilators should be covered with a cap, to prevent downward currenus and the beating in of rain. By this plan the down-ward rain is carried off directly from the stall without mixing with the hay in the loft.

A Profitable Wife.

I have been married twenty-two years. The first four years before I was married, I began farming with 250 acres, in the Biue Grass region, Ky. I handled cattle, hogs, sheep and horses—principally the two first named—and lived, I thought, tolerably economically; spent none of my money for tobacco in any way; never betting a cent or dissipating in any way, and yet at the end of the four years I had made little or no clear money. I then married a and yet at the end of the loar parties and it the or no clear money. I then married a young lady eighteen years of age—who had never done any housework or work of any kind, except make a portion of her own clothes. She had never made a shirt, drawers, pants, or walst coat, or even sewed a stitch on a coat, and yet before we had been married a year she had made for me every one of the articles of clothing named, and knit numbers of pairs of socks for me—yes, and mended divers articles for me, net excepting an old hat or two. She had also mede butter, sold aggs, chickens, and other fowls, and vegetables to the amount of near $600 in cash, at the end of the year, whereas, during the four years that I was single, I had never sold five cents' worth—besides making me purely happy and contented with and at my home. And so far as to making of money, we have made money clear of expenses every year since we have been married, in everything that we have undertaken on the farm, and she has made from $850 to $500 every year, except one, during the time, selling butter, eggs, and marketing of different kinds. My yearly expenses for fine clothing, etc., before I was married were more than my yearly expenses were after I was married, combined with the expenses of my wife and children, and our farm has increased from 250 to 650 acres; and I believe that if I had not married, it would never have increased hu: little, if any, and I have never been absent from home six nights, when my wife was at our home. since we were married, and her cheeks hise as aweetly to me as they did the morning after I was married.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

RECEIPTS.

VERY FIRE TRAST.—Boil five or six pared po-tatoes; when soft, mash them in the boiling water over the fire, put in a half a tescupful of dried hops, and let them boil ten minutes (not longer), and then strain through a colander. Put in a little salt and stir it well; thin it with milk warm water until of the consistency of thin waffle batter. When lukewarm, etir in a teacupful of liquid yeast. Set it near the back part of the stove, or in a tolerably warm place, to rice, and in twelve or fourteen hours it will be light. If not, put in a little more yeast. If the weather is warm, it will not require to be placed near the stove. If you wish dry years, rub it in sifted corn meal until it is a dry doogh, and spread thin on dishes or walters, to dry in the air, but not in the sun. In winter it can be set near the back part of the stove, but not in too warm a place, or it will not rise. If you wish liquid yeast, pour it into a stone jug, and cork tightly. When you strain the hop water over the flour, set your bucket containing the flour beside the stove or fire, with the colander over it, and let the pot containing the hop-water and potatoe remain over the fire, whilst you are dipping out the water and hops and potatoes, so that the flour will be well scalded. A small quantity of hops is used, because more would darken the yeast and bread, as well as spoil the sweetness of the bread. If your yeast should get a little our, add a very little soda to it before putting

To PRESERVE GREEN GAGE PLUMS - Weigh the fruit and put into the kettle with alternate layers of vine-leaves. Fill the kettle with cold water, and let them simmer until the kin begins to crack open. Then remove from the fire and pare them with a knife, leaving the stems on Measure the parings, and for every pint deduct a pound from the weight of the fruit. Scald the fruit again after it has been pared. Make a syrup of a pound of sugar to every pound of fruit with a very little water, and when clarified. drep in the fruit and sook slowly until clear. Then remove from the syrup, and add pound of sugar to the syrup, and boil for half an hour.

If you do not wish to take off the skins, prick hem with a pin.

AFRICOTS — Pour boiling water on the fruit, and wipe them dry. Then cut them in halvee and stone them. Take equal parts of fruit and sugar, and, when the syrup has been boiled, put in the fruit and cook it slowly until it is c and the syrup is rich.

GREEN LEMONS -- Cut them in halves, take out the pulp, and cut in fancy shapes. Put into adding a little alum to green them. Boil until clear, and then take them out and drain them on a cloth. Clean the kettle, and put them in with their weight in sugar, and stew them slowly until the syrup is rich.

QUINCES - When the fruit is pared and cored, put them into a kettle with water en over them, and boil until quite tender but not soft. Cut them in rings, and put on them their weight in sugar, and let them stand while the cores and parings are boiled, in the same water from which they were taken, in order to make Have the kettle cleaned; put in the quinces and let them simmer with the sugar and water the parings were boiled in. Skim well, and when clear take up the quinces and boil the GREEN PEFFERS .- Leave the stems on them remove the seeds, and put them in salt and water for three days, changing the water every day. Then green them in a kettle with cold water, vine leaves and a little alum; simmer thu for two hours. Then put them into fresh water for three days, changing the water every day. Then boil in a syrup of a pound of sugar to the same weight of pepper and a little water, for half an hour. Fill the inside with candled

PRANS .- Pare the fruit, leaving the stems on and put into cold water. You may remove the core, or not, as you please. Make a syrup of a pound of sugar and half a pint of water to every pound of pears, and boil with some lemon-pee or green ginger. Put in the fruit and cook until clear, and let the syrup remain over the fire until thick.—Dixis Cookery.

THE RIDDLER.

Enigma.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY SYRKING POST.

I am composed of 18 letters. My 5, 6, 8, is found in cold countries.

My 1, 10, 18, 7, is used by soldiers, My 10, 9, 5, 3, is a town in New York, My 15, 16, 18, 10, 13, is a common nam My 15, 16, 18, 10, 13, is a common name. My 3, 8, 9, 11, 4, 10, is the fashion to go to at oonsidered very sweet.

My 16, 12, is a preposition.

My whole is the name of a book.

LEGABEL.

Classical Rebus. WRITTER FOR THE SATURDAY SYREIDS POST.

An emperor of Rome. A king of Egypt.
A samous city of Phenicia.

A king of Macedonia A king of Macedonia.

A beautiful youth, changed by the gods into the flower which bears his name.

A distinguished Grock rhetorician. In tradition, the founder of Rome. The first Roman

My initials form the name of an ancient prophetese. AZARIAN.

Single Acrostic. The initials of the words denoted by the folowing extracts make up the name of an esteemed poet, from whom all the passages are taken :

. "Tread lightly here; for here, 'tis said, When piping winds are hushed around, A small note wates from underground, Where now his tiny bones are laid."

Wont in the night of woods to dwell. The boly D uid saw thee rise;
And, planting there the guardian shell,
Saug forth, the dreadful pomp to swell
Of human sacrifice. Of human sacrifice

"Now near and nearer rush thy whirring wings, Thy dragon scales still wet with human gore. Hark I thy shrill born its fearful larum fluge :

wake in horror, and dare sleep no more. "Where the rock is rent in two, And the river rushes through, His voice was heard no more. 'Twas but a step, the guif he passed; But that step—it was his last."

"In his despair, as though the die were cast, He flang him down to weep, and wept till dawn;

Then rose to go a wanderer through the world." But lo, at last he comes with crowded sail !

Lo, o'er the cliff what eager figures bend! And bark, what mingled murmurs swell the gale! In each he hears the welcome of a friend."

Problem.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY SYRKING POST.

A man purchased three pieces of cloth for $20; for the first he paid as many dollars per yard as there were yards in it, and for the second and third each as many dollars per yard as there were yards in the other; he sold the second for as many dollars per yard as there were yards in it, and the first and third each for were yards in it, and the first and third each for as many dollars per yard as there were yards in the other, by which he gained 10 per cent; but had he sold the third for as many dollars per yard as there were yards in it, and the first and second each for as many dollars per yard as there were yards in the other, he would have lost 10 per cent. Required, the number of lost 10 per cent. Required, the number of yards in each piece. MELVILLE.

An answer is requested.

Probability Problem.

WRITTER FOR THE SATURDAY SYRKING POST.

Four points are placed at random on a plane. Required, the probability that one of then fall within the greatest circle that can be in-scribed in the triangle formed by the other three.

ARTEMAS MARTIN.

Franklin, Venango Co., Pa. An answer is requested.

Problem. WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY SYRPING POST.

I purchased for a cloak 52 yards of cloth that was 1 g yards wide; to line this I purchased flannel that was a yard wide, but on being wet it shrunk 1 neil in width and 1 yard in every 20 yards in length. How many yards of flannel did it take to line the cloak? W. H. MORROW.

Irroin Station, Pa.

An answer is requested.

Conundrums.

Why was Desdemona the most discontented of all women? Ans.—Because the Moor she had—the Moor she wanted.

Why is the man that blows the bog'e like a schoolmaster? Ans.—Because he's a

When a joker dies what kind of a ve-when a joker dies what kind of a vehicle does he make? Ans—A wag gone.

When did man give the snake a nationality? Ans.—When he first "Scoten-ed it."
This is very bad.

Answers to Last.

ENIGMA-Seat. ALTERNATE DOUBLE ACROSTIC-Baby Teck.

B-onne-T. E-v-A. B-tvous-C.

A German writer complains of the diffi-culties of the English language, and cites the word Box, which he says is pronounced Dickens.

Probably the reason why the way of the transgreasor is hard is, that it is so much travelled.